

The Scholarship of Teaching and Learning at EMU

---

Volume 3 *Spiraling Upwards: EMU Faculty
Transform Through the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning*

Article 3

---

2010

Acknowledgements

Follow this and additional works at: <http://commons.emich.edu/sotl>

---

Recommended Citation

(2010) "Acknowledgements," The Scholarship of Teaching and Learning at EMU: Vol. 3 , Article 3.
Available at: <http://commons.emich.edu/sotl/vol3/iss1/3>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Bruce K. Nelson Faculty Development Center at DigitalCommons@EMU. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Scholarship of Teaching and Learning at EMU by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@EMU. For more information, please contact lib-ir@emich.edu.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS FROM THE EDITOR

Thank you, readers, for taking the time to engage in the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL) and for being curious to investigate our chapters in Spiraling Upwards. We hope that you find inspiration and encouragement here to explore student learning in whatever context that works in your world.

Jeffrey Bernstein, Sarah Ginsburg, and Karen Busch, thank you for your leadership during the SoTL seminars. In the seminars we learned what SoTL is and what it isn't; we experienced new and different research methodologies, and we bonded together as a collaborative group of fellows.

To the eight faculty authors, we are grateful for your commitment to student learning and persistence in completing your SoTL research and writing up your findings. Readers, you can learn more about each author in the Biographies of Contributors section of this book.

This book would not be possible without advice on formatting and publication through Digital Commons from Librarian Julia Nims, as well as copy editing from Clare Sansburn and copy editing support from student staff members Rachael Innocenzi, Kaitlyn McFarlane, Kaylee Brown, Samantha Glowacki, and Devon Vaughn. We also thank all those who reviewed these chapters; Jeffery Bernstein, Karen Busch, and the many colleagues from various disciplines external to EMU who agreed to peer-review on behalf of the authors.

Gratitude and praise goes to Samantha Glowacki, our talented undergraduate student, for designing the cover to Spiraling Upwards.

A final word of appreciation goes to Eastern Michigan University for supporting the Faculty Development Center and the instructors at this institution who are committed to their professional development.

Peggy Liggitt

Eastern Michigan University