Affiliated with Eastern Michigan University's Bruce T. Halle Library

Volume 32, Number 4

As the conference season approaches, I am reminded of the many different directions that Instruction Librarians simultaneously travel.

In the east, there is the 34th annual LOEX Conference: Moving Targets: Understanding Our Changing Landscapes. The stellar program put together by the hard-working planning committee at the University of Maryland is sure to impress. The program is now posted at www.lib.umd.edu/loex2006/. Many thanks to Maggie Cunningham and her team for organizing and hosting this year's conference.

Moving west, the LOEX of the West Conference, Information Literacy for a Lifetime, will concentrate on addressing the needs and issues involved with encouraging a culture of lifelong learning. The program, which is available online at www.hawaii.edu/loex/, is outstanding.

And in the north, there is the 35th annual WILU Conference, Charting a Course for Instruction. Their program will focus on the common issues we face regardless of our direction. View the diverse and challenging WILU lineup at library.acadiau.ca/wilu/.

Regardless of which direction you are headed, you are guaranteed an insightful journey. Enjoy!
