MICHIGAN COLLEGE PRESIDENTS PASS FINANCIAL AID RESOLUTION

A resolution concerning federal support of student financial aid was passed unanimously at a meeting Feb. 18 of more than 40 Michigan college presidents and their financial aid officers.

The gathering was held at the Gerald R. Ford Library on The University of Michigan campus at the suggestion of U-M President Harold T. Shapiro.

The gathering was the first by presidents of Michigan's community colleges, independent colleges, and public colleges and universities in more than a decade.

Some of the text of the resolution follows:

"As presidents of over forty of Michigan's colleges and universities, we would like to express our concern for the future of federal support of student financial aid.

"We believe that, if the full cutbacks currently proposed by the Reagan Administration are enacted, they may have tremendous impact on access to higher education for many American families.

"If a decision were reached greatly to diminish the availability of education for hundreds of thousands of our citizens, we believe that that decision should be made in full recognition of the implications for our national interest.

"We all recognize that certain adjustments are necessary if our country is to live within its means. We agree that higher education must participate in these adjustments and we are ready to do so. Our concern is that the proposed cuts are precipitous ones, which will have the effect of isolating whole strata of our population from the benefits of higher education at a time when our country is much in need of the strength that comes from highly trained people and the wisdom that comes from an educated citizenry," the resolution stated.
