INTENSIVE SURVEY
NORTHWESTERN ANN ARBOR NEIGHBORHOOD

GEO - 630
PREPARED BY LINDI HIGGINS
NOVEMBER 30, 1991
SURVEY REPORT

"An Historical and Architectural Overview of a Northwestern Ann Arbor Neighborhood"

The northwestern portion of the City of Ann Arbor is situated north of The Old West Side Historical District and includes a variety of house styles representing a wide range in age. The portion of this area surveyed for this report is bound by Arbana Drive to the west, Arbor View Boulevard to the north and Mark Hannah Place to the east and south. Thirty residential structures were surveyed for their architectural and historical significance. The structures date primarily from the 1930s to the late 1940s.

The pleasant one-family dwellings are situated on peaceful tree-shaded streets in close proximity to the business and commercial section of Ann Arbor. Although no open space was included in the surveyed area, several parks are located in close proximity to this neighborhood. For purposes of this survey report, neighborhood refers directly to the area bounded by Arbor View, Mark Hannah, and Arbana Drive.

The settlement of this neighborhood was linked to the expansion of the City of Ann Arbor towards the northwest in the 1930s and 1940s. The city incorporated the area surveyed, into its city limits in 1915, however, the neighborhood was not subdivided into lots until the 1930s. A growing middle class emerged in the post war boom in the 1940s. Many families prospered in the Ypsilanti/Ann Arbor factories which produced war supplies. The prospering middle class families were increasingly able to purchase homes and automobiles.

Older homes lie to the south and southwest in The Old West Side historical district, and to the east and northeast. The homes directly surrounding the surveyed area across the streets of Mark Hannah, Arbor View, and Arbana Drive are of the same approximate age. The curving street patterns of the 1920s to 1940s of this neighborhood and the area west of the surveyed area contrast with the straight street patterns of the older homes located to the south, east, and northeast. Houses located to the south and southeast of the surveyed area are slightly larger indicating a slight increase in affluence.

All of the houses surveyed in the area were wood frame houses constructed on concrete foundations. The roofs were either side gable or hip all covered with composition shingles. The houses in the surveyed area fall into approximately four categories. The older homes built in the 1930s are Colonial Revival Bungalow or Modern styles. The more modest Bungalows are one, or one and a half story homes with side gable roofs and horizontal clapboard siding. Many of the bungalows were symmetrical with simple classical details. Most have no garage, or a detached garage was added at a later date.
In contrast, the Modern styles are two story dwellings and often were constructed with an attached one-car garage. Asymmetrical cubes with hip roofs, the Modern houses were constructed with corner windows on at least one end of the front facade on both the first and second floors. The facades are covered with a mixture of sidings often including horizontal clapboard, vertical board and batten, and brick veneer.

The post war houses were predominantly Colonial Revival Bungalows, Garrison, or Rambling Revivals with several Ranch houses constructed in the 1950s. The bungalows were mostly symmetrical, one and a half story houses with side gable roofs, horizontal siding or asbestos shingle, and simple classical details. The Bungalows usually had a detached one car garage.

The Garrison and Rambling style Colonial Revivals in the neighborhood are two story dwellings with gable roofs often possessing an attached garage which is set back from the house or attached by a breezeway. Most have asymmetrical facades with side entrance ways. These houses are usually clad in a mixture of sidings including horizontal clapboard, vertical board and batten, and brick veneer or asbestos shingles.

There are two Ranch houses constructed in the 1950s with a garage forming an L-shaped floor plan. These houses have gable roofs and are constructed with both horizontal siding and brick veneer.

The streets in the neighborhood are relatively quiet with little traffic. Arbana Drive and Mark Hannah Place are 50 foot wide residential streets with Arbor View acting as an 85 foot main neighborhood Boulevard. There are concrete sidewalks on both sides of all streets within the surveyed area. Most of the houses have concrete walks leading from their front door straight to the sidewalk or turning 90 degrees to the driveway. All of the streets are lined with tall trees, although the thickness of the tree trunks indicate the trees are less than 50 years in age. Most of the houses have flat grass lawns with evergreen shrubs planted close to the house. The more affluent homes also have plantings along the driveway, front walk, or sidewalk.

Today the area retains its pleasant neighborhood character with continued usage as one-family, middle class dwellings. Almost all of the houses are in good condition, with well-manicured yards. The area is significant for its association with the growth and development of Ann Arbor in the 1930s and 1940s and the growth of an increasingly wealthy middleclass in America in the late 1930s and 1940s. The neighborhood is typical of this era and class and its well maintained houses provide a visual record documenting this American phenomenon. Many of the houses in the neighborhood, however, are not quite fifty years old.

Architectural Statement:

Situated on a narrow lot with a grass lawn, the 2-story, wood frame house has a 1-story, 1-car garage. The garage is set back from the front facade, but is attached to the house. The house is a Colonial Revival Garrison Style but it has an asymmetrical facade. The house is covered in asbestos shingle with a brick veneer on the first story. The house is typical of the middle class houses in the neighborhood. The house also possesses an exterior brick chimney on the side of the house. A side gable roof is shingled.

Architectural Statement:
Situated on a flat, grass-covered lot this is a 1-story Colonial Revival Bungalow constructed of wood frame and a single hipped roof. The symmetrical facade has a central entrance with a small front gable, a simple classical trim around the doorframe. The symmetrically placed windows are surrounded by shutters. The 3-bay Bungalow is typical of modest income homes of the area.
