On this day... On this day in 1787 - The Constitution of the United States of America was signed by delegates at the Constitutional Convention.

Quote: "In not making the decision, you've made one. Not doing something is the same as doing it." - Ivan Bloch

Fact: The construction of Mount Rushmore National Memorial took about 14 years, from 1927 to 1941. Doane Robinson of the South Dakota Historical Society wanted a monument to be built in South Dakota in order to help the economy of the state by attracting tourism. In 1923, he proposed that this monument should be built from the granite cliffs in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota approved the proposal, and federal funds helped the project. Robinson asked architect and sculptor Gutzon Borglum to sculpt and design the monument. Borglum decided to use Mount Rushmore for the sculpture, since it seemed to be the easiest of the cliffs to work on of four Presidents of the United States.

His original design was a sculpture of the four presidents intended to go down to their waists, but time and money only provided for their heads. Ivan Houser, an assistant sculptor helped Borglum in the early years of carving.

George Washington's head was started first and dedicated in 1934. Thomas Jefferson's head was started next (to the left of Washington's), but before Jefferson's head was completed, Borglum ordered that it be blasted off due to poor rock quality and it was started again, but would be located to the right of Washington's head this time. Jefferson's head was dedicated in 1936.

Abraham Lincoln's head was more of a challenge because of his beard, but his head was completed on the far right of the cliff, dedicated in 1937.

While Theodore Roosevelt's head was being constructed, accommodations for tourists were being built, including plumbing, lighting, and a visitor center. Not finding suitable rock, the sculptors cut farther back into the mountain, causing concerns about how far they were cutting. Roosevelt's head was dedicated in 1939.
