ALUMNI NEWSLETTER

Ypsilanti, Michigan - October, 1962 - Vol. XV No. 1

Adult Education Registration at Dearborn Center

Published in the interests of the Alumni at intervals during the school year by the Division of Field Services, Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti, Michigan. PUBLICATION COMMITTEE: Earl K. Studt ('32), Director of Alumni Relations; Ethel C. Ackerman, Editor; Lucille A. Marshall, Editorial Assistant.

A Statement From President Eugene B. Elliott To The Alumni

Last spring a group of Eastern alumni, apparently small in number but clearly not in volume, made certain statements about the University and what they felt to be its decline and impending fall. Many of the statements and accusations were too wild to merit an answer. Most of these alumni are products of one particular educational program of the University and it is clear that their statements had one central theme: what they felt to be a decline in Eastern's athletic glories.

I believe strongly in a healthy, sound, and vigorous athletic program for all of our students—directed by a professionally qualified staff. I believe students participating in athletics should be regular students of the University, meeting the same admissions requirements as other students, and eligible for scholarships, loans, or other aid on the same basis as all other students.

I am in favor of admissions standards which offer reasonable assurance to the student who meets those standards that he will succeed in college and particularly at Eastern Michigan University. I believe that these admissions standards should be applied equally to all applicants without a differential standard for students with athletic ability, or for that matter, with any other special aptitude or skill not directly pertinent to their work at the University.

I do not believe that a won and lost record in intercollegiate athletics is an accurate measurement of either the health of an athletic program or the general progress of the University. I do not believe that a growth in enrollment at the University without an accompanying concern for the ability of the students to succeed in college is a measurement of a university's progress.

Eastern Michigan University is proud of its record in producing teachers for the schools of Michigan and the nation. It is proud that many of those teachers have been outstanding in the field of physical education. I feel that we are still producing outstanding teachers in this and other areas, and it is my intent that we continue to do so. Eastern Michigan's graduate program is now fourth largest of all the state-supported colleges and universities in Michigan, and it is a graduate program almost completely dedicated to teacher education. I feel that our liberal arts and pre-professional programs can be a source of pride to our students, our faculty, and our alumni.

For the past several years Eastern has been participating in an athletic conference whose philosophy and practices have varied considerably from our philosophy and our practices. The gap has seemingly widened. As a result of this gap, the University recently joined the Presidents' Athletic Conference—a conference whose philosophy and practices are, in intent and in substance, the same as ours.

I hope that you, as alumni, will take every opportunity to make your own judgments about the present state of the University. I hope that you will find the opportunity to judge for yourselves the state of the morale of the faculty and the student body at Eastern. By every index that I can use, they seem to be high and healthy. I hope that you will make a judgment based on the performance of the whole University and not on one relatively small aspect of one particular program.

The following is reprinted from the Lansing State Journal of May 20, 1962. The Board of Directors of the Alumni Association at its meeting of June 2, 1962 approved and supported Eastman's statement:

The head of the Eastern Michigan University Alumni Association Saturday night strongly defended the school's President, Eugene B. Elliott, against charges that Eastern Michigan University is losing prestige.

The alumni chief, Norwood D. Eastman of East Lansing, made the defense in a telephone call to the State Journal from Lafayette, Indiana, where he was on business as an official of the American Farm Bureau.

An Alumni faction from Detroit headed by James G. Matthews has demanded the ouster of Elliott and other top aides, charging that in recent years the school has suffered "a gradual decline in prestige and vitality."

"I am amazed," Eastman countered, "by Mr. Matthews's contention that the school is losing prestige. At the beginning of the 1961-1962 school year there was a waiting list of names of about 900 students who desired entry at the University. This hardly indicates a loss of prestige."

Eastman continued:

"I want to make it clear that Mr. Matthews does not speak for the Alumni Association. To my knowledge he has never made his opinions known to the Alumni Board. This could have been done at any chapter or at any regular board meeting.

"In my five years as a member of the Alumni Board, I have always found President Elliott most cooperative.

"I have enjoyed working with him and feel certain this is the feeling of other board members."

Eastman, a former Eastern Michigan University faculty member, has been President of the Alumni Association for two years.

Elliott served as State Superintendent of Public Instruction for many years before assuming the Presidency of the Ypsilanti university in 1948.

EASTERN JOINS ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAM

Grant H. Wessel, Assistant Professor of English and Speech at EMU, and Area Supervisor for Adult Education, has furnished us with this informative and timely article.

It was in the fall of 1958, just four school years ago, that the University Center for Adult Education, then known as the Division of Adult Education, opened its doors to adults in Detroit who wished "to continue to learn." Since that time, over 30,000 individuals have enrolled in its educational programs: rather convincing evidence that if you are an adult who believes that learning is "adventure on the grand scale," there is an activity in the Center which will interest you.

Today, in the fall of 1962, the Center presents the strengths of the faculties of three universities, Wayne State University, The University of Michigan, and Eastern Michigan University, and offers you the opportunity to study on the university level irrespective of your educational background. The courses described in our catalogues do not offer university credit nor lead to degrees; they are designed for all who wish to learn for the sake of learning.

The statements above were written by the Director of the University Center for Adult Education, Hamilton Stillwell. They present in capsule the history, philosophy, and growth of a remarkable experiment in a cooperative approach to providing educational opportunities for all who desire "to continue to learn."

The University Center for Adult Education began as a joint cooperative effort between the University of Michigan and Wayne State University and was then known as the Division for Adult Education. In January of 1962, Eastern Michigan University united with its sister institutions, thus channeling the strengths and resources of three great universities through an organization which then was named the University Center for Adult Education.

Some of the guidelines which have governed the Center's activities are:

1. The Center will sponsor only those activities which are non-credit in nature. Thus, it can and does recognize the obligation to provide educational opportunities for the man whose only desire in getting an education is his desire to learn.
2. The Center will select its instructors only from those qualified persons who have been approved by an academic department of one or all of the three cooperating universities, so that Center activities will be conducted by highly trained and vitally interested personnel.
3. The Center will cooperate with other community agencies in developing activities which are geared to meet the needs and interests of the community.

On May 15, 1960 the Center adopted the following Statement of Philosophy:

The University Center for Adult Education aims to extend the resources of Wayne State University, The University of Michigan, and Eastern Michigan University to the adult population of southeastern Michigan which includes and borders the campuses of the three Universities. The Center considers these resources to be: (1) the offering of courses and educational programs by faculty members of the three Universities in subject matter areas of interest and concern to adults; (2) the presentation of the results of university research through a variety of educational activities such as classes, institutes, conferences, and workshops and; (3) utilization of the physical resources of the three Universities by adults for conferences and similar educational activities.

*Grant E. Wessel
Area Supervisor for Adult Education*

All activities sponsored by the Center are of a non-credit nature. Primarily, it is believed that adults with at least a high school education will be interested in the programs offered by the Center, but its activities are open to all adults who believe they can profit by study in its programs. The emphasis in the Center's courses is (1) in special subjects in which adults are interested, i.e., recent developments in science, appreciation of music, international affairs and the like; (2) in occupational refresher courses or vocational improvement programs which utilize the scholarship of the Universities; and (3) in liberal education courses which develop "the educated man."

The Center also cooperates with community groups and organizations in co-sponsoring educational programs of a college or university level which the organization or group and the Center believe should be offered under university auspices. In such instances qualified persons from the community may be employed as teachers, if they are approved by academic departments of either or all of the Universities.

The Center encourages the academic departments of the three Universities to participate in its educational activities. It also encourages those units of the Universities interested in adult learning and the teaching of adults to utilize its classes and students as a laboratory for research.

The staff of the Center exerts leadership in planning educational programs for adults. It calls upon the University and the community to aid it in developing these plans. The staff of the Center also assumes leadership in adult education programming in the community with other adult education agencies. It endeavors to sponsor a number of its programs on a cooperative basis with these agencies.

The staff of the Center through study of professional literature and attendance at professional conferences keeps abreast of new developments in the field of adult education and puts these into practice.

The philosophy of the University Center is both fostered and followed by its staff and its advisory board.

Its advisory board is comprised of six representatives of each of the co-operating universities.

The following members of Eastern's faculty are currently representing this institution on the advisory board: Raymond LaBournty, Haydn Morgan, Clark G. Spike, Donald Drummond, Carl Anderson, and Grant Wessel.

On July 1, 1962, Grant H. Wessel, assistant professor in the Department of English and Speech at Eastern Michigan University, was appointed adult education supervisor of Southeastern Michigan. Activities in the Detroit area are under the direct supervision of Mr. Stillwell and the assistant director, who is to be appointed. Mr. Wessel has administrative responsibilities for Center activities at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, at the Dearborn Center of the University of Michigan, at Eastern Michigan University, and at high schools and community centers throughout sections of southeastern Michigan.

During the month of September, registration for Center activities were conducted in scores of communities throughout Southeastern Michigan. In four university centers, 200 courses were offered this fall.

Courses offered on Eastern's campus this fall were: Creative Art, Music Appreciation, Introduction to Data Processing, Effective Supervision, Elements of Marketing, The Function of Management, Industrial Psychology, Safety Administration, Salesmanship, Business and Professional Speaking, and Conference Leadership.

In addition to these courses, the Center will sponsor a series of lectures, informal talks, and seminars. At the present time, the Center is preparing to sponsor three lecture series on Eastern's campus with Albert Brown, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, serving as co-ordinator. The proposed series will deal with the following areas: Literature and the Arts, America and World Affairs, and Michigan: The Changing Scene. Hopefully, the initial series will begin in November of this year.

In four years a unique organization has been born and has grown to a point where its activities are shared by over 30,000 Michigan residents. Today the Center is anxious to share its limitless potential with the communities that it serves and to cooperate with existing community organizations in bringing the very best in educational opportunities to all adults who desire to "continue to learn."

EMU TO AID SOMALIA

Under the terms of a contract signed September 6 between Eastern Michigan University and the Agency for International Development, a branch of the U.S. State Department, several members of the University staff will provide technical advice and assistance for the improvement of teacher education in the Somali Republic during the next three years. A total of $587,145 is budgeted for the three-year program, which became effective in August, 1962, and ends July 31, 1965. Faculty members who will participate in the project have not yet been selected, according to R. Stanley Gex, Dean of the College of Education.

The contract between the Agency for International Development and Eastern Michigan was the result of an educational survey made under a preliminary contract in the summer of 1961 by Dean Gex and Ronald J. Slay, Professor of education at EMU. The contract provides for a chief of party to report to Somalia by Feb. 1, 1963. He will supervise the completion of facilities and the arrangements for four more professional staff members and a secretary to report on July 31.

Under the terms of the contract, faculty members selected for the project will assist in both pre-service and in-service preparation of teachers and will also improve instruction, organize departments, streamline the administration, and develop specialists in teaching at the Teacher Training Institute in Afgoi, Somalia.

Dean Gex said he anticipates renegotiation of the contract after its expiration date in 1965. The aim of the project is to develop Somalia educational programs and facilities to the point where the Somalis can take over the operation themselves within a period of six years.

Anyone interested in serving as a staff member in this project should contact Dean R. Stanley Gex or Charles Rice, campus coordinator of the project, at EMU.

New Physical Education Building and New Residence Hall Planned

An appropriation of $750,000 was received in the last session of the Legislature to complete plans and specifications, and to start construction on a new physical education building for Eastern. Swanson Associates, Inc. of Bloomfield Hills, Michigan are the architects. Working drawings and specifications are now being prepared, and it is expected that ground will be broken for the structure some time in February. The total cost for the facility will be $1,700,000.

The physical education building will be located immediately adjacent to Bowen Field House (to the east); in fact, it will become one facility with Bowen. It will contain three large gymnasiums; three utility and special-purpose gymnasiums; a swimming pool; classrooms; a lecture hall; a laboratory; locker facilities; handball courts; and faculty offices. Completion is expected before the start of the 1964-65 school year.

Construction on a new residence hall, the third in the new complex, is also expected to start this fall.

*I spill this ink on the whitened page
To say I revere a very good clock
That struck off the hours on a little shelf,
Saying, "Time to get up, you sleepy
elf,
Hurry, leave footprints on the frost
crinkled grass,
It's time you were in that early class!"
Outside, stood old trees, quite golden and red,
As October's blue weather sped
smoke overhead!
Thus, with fond memories, I gaze
o'er the years,
Back, as it were, to that class through dim tears.*
