2018 Culture of Research Excellence

The Office of Research Development and Administration is soliciting applications for the 3rd cohort of the EMU Culture of Research Excellence (CoRE) Grant Writing Program, starting Winter 2018. Support for this program is also provided by the College Deans and the University Librarian.

The CoRE program is for faculty who are ready to write a proposal and would like support during the process in order to produce a highly competitive application. To maximize the benefit of this program, eligible faculty participants should be ready to begin on a competitive proposal for federal funding. Evidence of readiness may include one or more of the following:

- Clear research idea with relevance for program within a specific directorate or institute
- Prior submission of federal research funding
- Prior non-federal funding
- Preliminary data in hand
- Relevant research publications
- Effective collaboration established (if applicable)

The CoRE program will offer:

- Winter 2018 Grant Writing Bootcamp
- o Includes seminars by national experts

- o Peer support and review
- o Travel to Washington DC to meet with Program Officers
 - Release time during the Winter 2018 semester to attend a weekly grant writing bootcamp and work on your proposal
 - Summer writing group
 - Release time in Fall of 2018 to complete your proposal.

Applications due October 9, 2017

Selections will be announced October 23, 2017

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Domestic Violence Prevention Enhancement and Leadership through Alliances Impact

Notice seeking applications to help reduce intimate partner violence (IPV) risk factors and increase IPV protective factors by: 1) increasing strategic data-driven planning and executing community and societal level prevention activities; 2) furthering the development of evidence-based community and societal-level programs and policy efforts to prevent IPV; and 3) supporting the integration of prevention goals and action steps throughout the state and local level capacity building activities.

Next Deadline: Required Letters of Intent due October 27, 2017 ; Full Application due January 15, 2018

National Institutes of Health, National Institute on Drug Abuse, Science of Behavior Change: Use-inspired Research to Optimize Adherence, Behavior Change Interventions, and Outcomes (R21)

The overarching mission of the SOBC Program is to implement a mechanisms-focused, experimental medicine approach to behavior change research. An additional goal is to develop the assays required to implement such an approach. An experimental medicine approach involves four steps: 1) identifying putative intervention targets; 2) developing assays (measures) to permit verification of target engagement; 3) engaging the target through experimentation or intervention; and 4) testing the degree to which target engagement produces the desired behavior change. Putative intervention targets are synonymous with "mechanisms of action" and with processes that are hypothesized to be malleable and to play a causal role in producing behavior change. Behavior change, as defined here, includes the initiation, cessation, modification, and maintenance of behaviors (e.g., diet, exercise, abstinence from substance use, adherence to prevention or treatment protocols) that have broad health implications across a wide range of functional and clinical outcomes and disease conditions. Appropriate adherence to prescriptions, screenings, immunizations, behavioral regimens, and the like, as prescribed by a health professional or as an evidence-based recommendation of an authorized entity, such as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention or the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, is a highly-desired health behavior outcome.
