Dr. Michael Scoville of the Philosophy Department will be the featured lecturer for the evening. This event is LBC approved.

Global environmental change, such as that associated with climate change, threatens the flourishing of humans and nonhuman nature. Someone will need to bear the burdens of addressing problematic environmental change, for example, by supporting mitigation, adaptation, and/or restoration efforts. Who should bear these burdens? Further, what constitutes a fair share of the use of the environment, such as the use of the atmosphere as a "sink" for our greenhouse gases? It is difficult to answer the question of burden sharing without also answering the question of who is entitled to what with regard to the use of the global environment. This lecture will explore different possible answers to these questions and will consider some of the philosophical challenges raised by environmental change given its global, intergenerational, and interspecific nature. For questions, contact Rebecca Bowers Sipe at 487-0341 or email at rsipe@emich.edu.

Fact: L'Anse aux Meadows is an archaeological site on the northernmost tip of Newfoundland in the Canadian province of Newfoundland and Labrador. Discovered in 1960, it is the only known site of a Norse or Viking village in Canada, and in North America outside of Greenland.

Dating to around the year 1000, L'Anse aux Meadows remains the only widely accepted instance of pre-Columbian trans-oceanic contact and is notable for its possible connection with the attempted colony of Vinland established by Leif Ericson around the same time period or, more broadly, with Norse exploration of the Americas.

Archaeological excavation at the site was conducted in the 1960s by an international team led by archaeologist Anne Stine Ingstad and under the direction of Parks Canada of the Government of Canada in the 1970s. Following each period of excavation, the site was reburied to protect and conserve the cultural resources.
