

Campus Capsules

Beginning with this issue, Focus EMU has been reduced to two pages and will continue with this format for the duration of the current labor dispute. We will concentrate on providing essential information, such as the calendar, openings and WEMU program guide, with space for a few other items. Our deadlines continue to be 10 days prior to the publication date. We will resume our normal format as soon as the strike is over.

The annual luncheon meeting of the Faculty Women's Club has been rescheduled for Saturday, April 10, at the Flaming Pit, 3750 Washtenaw, at 12:30 p.m. Reservations should be sent to Prof. Sandra McClennen, Special Education Department, accompanied by a check for $4 made out to the Faculty Women's Club. Officers will be elected, annual reports will be presented, retiring members will be honored and the club's goals for 1976-77 will be discussed.

"Job Opportunities for Women in Business" will be the featured topic in a seminar to be held today in 313 Pray-Harrod at 3 p.m. Joan Schiller, coordinator of business advising for the College of Business, is chairperson for the event. Featured speakers for the seminar include Sam Sarasa, employment counselor for Management Recruiters; Grace Oldenbrook, personnel representative for the University Hospital in Ann Arbor; SuAnne Sharif, salesperson for Michigan AUTOSONICS; and Glenda Ford, financial planner for the J.L. Hudson Company. The objective of the seminar is to help women clarify their career objectives. The public is cordially invited.

Twenty-two high school players have signed national letters of intent to attend EMU in the fall. The 22 standout high schoolers represent a total of 18 teams and Head Coach George Mans is counting on the newly-recruited players to help the Hurons in their first season in competition for the Mid-American Conference crown as well as their first year in Division I. Eastern will open the season Sept. 4 in a 7:30 p.m. game against MAC foe Ohio University under the lights at Rynearson Stadium.

Bob Parks, EMU head cross country and track coach, was voted the 1975 NCAA District IV "Coach of the Year" for the indoor track season. The award is based on competition from Jan.-Dec. 1975. The award was the second consecutive indoor honor for the Hurons' head mentor. During the 1975 indoor season, EMU won the Central Collegiate Conference championship and placed fourth at the NCAA Indoor Meet. Since assuming the head coaching duties at EMU in 1967, Parks-coached teams have never lost an indoor meet. His record through the 1975-76 season is 39-0. "Coach of the Year" honors are voted on by the head track Coaches in each district. Parks is also a two-time winner of the district coaching award in cross country (1973-74).

EMU Players To Present 'Picnic' As Third Bicentennial Play

By Kathy Tinney

The EMU Players will present William Inge's "Picnic" Friday and Saturday, April 2 and 3, and Wednesday through Saturday, April 7-10, as the third play in an All-American season. Performances will be at 8 p.m. in Quirk Auditorium.

The production will be directed by Parker Zellers, professor of speech and dramatic arts. Dr. Zellers most recently directed "6 Rms Riv Vu" last spring during the Festival of Comedy. He also has directed "Awake and Sing," "Death of a Salesman" and "I Never Sang for My Father."

According to Dr. Zellers, "Picnic" must be considered one of the great American classics in post second world war drama. It is a play about human beings and their effect one upon the other for good and for bad.

The drama is set in a small town in Kansas not too far from Oklahoma. The action of the play takes place in a backyard shared by two homes on the evening of a Labor Day picnic.

The group of people with which the play is concerned all have been trapped in routines, leading unfulfilled, frustrating lives.

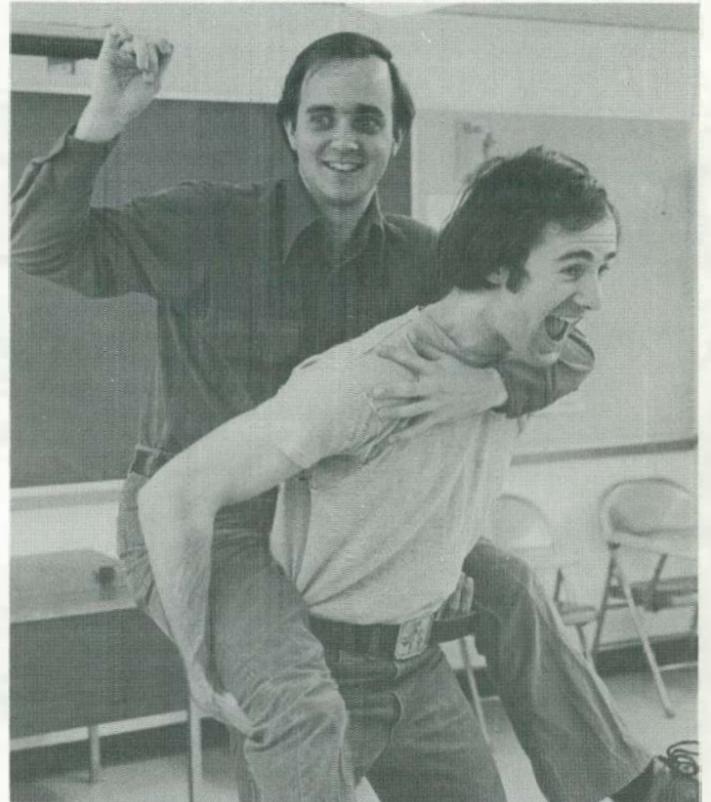

"Into their lives," explains Dr. Zellers, "comes a wandering young man, an abrasive, hard-talking, very masculine figure, a man of few words, little promise but great charm. The young man, Hal, brings changes to the lives of each of the people in the play, and, in turn, he is greatly affected by his association with them.

"Everybody in the play is hungry for something that their environment can't satisfy. Hal feeds the hunger these people have for some fulfillment in their lives and receives nourishment himself. Everyone comes out with a new realization of who and what they are, what their potentialities are.

"There is no deep message to the play. Simply, it is the story of how people affect people, and how lives can be altered by people you come in contact with."

Dr. Zellers describes the drama as a confrontation of Hal's masculine world with a feminine world. Inge, the playwright, has written about the play: "I was fascinated to find how protectively feminine it (the world) was, how the women seemed to have created a world of their own, a world in which they seemed to be pretending men did not exist. It was a world that had to be destroyed, at least for dramatic values. So Hal enters, and Hal lives in a world as protectively male as the women's world is female. He has been attracted to many women in his young life, but none has ever had a serious influence on him as a person. His mere presence in this little fortress of femininity brings the conflicts out of which I have fashioned the play. There is no tragic and noble death, nor does any glorified and inspiring rebirth come about as the resolution of the conflict, but I feel that each characterization in the play is brought to some new realizations."

Dr. Zellers says that Inge, author of "Bus Stop" and "Come Back Little Sheba," is one of the most prominent American playwrights of the post World War II period. "He has that understanding of human nature that enables him to see us all as what we are—happy, suffering, mixed up people. He is able to create very believable characters and very believable situations. He is able to cut right to the core of human equation. The audience will feel that it has been through a real human experience when it comes out.

"'Picnic' is one of those plays built of human emotion: it is very touching. It is a very moving play and at the end, you feel as though you're right back where you were. Hopefully the people in the play have learned something, but life for them will go on as it was."

Tickets for "Picnic," priced at $2.50 general admission and $1.75 for EMU students with an I.D., are now on sale at the Quirk Box Office, which is open weekdays 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. and until 8:30 p.m. evenings of performances. For reservations, call the box office at 487-1221

Regents Approve Room and Board Increases

Increases in residence hall room and board rates and family housing rates at EMU were approved March 17 by the EMU Board of Regents. Residence hall rates will become effective with the start of the 1976 fall semester and family housing rates will be effective July 1, 1976.

The cost of a room and any one of three meal plans will go up $80. Room and all meals (20 per week) will be $1460, an increase of 5.8 percent over this year's rate of $1380. Room and 15 meals per week will cost $1430, an increase of 5.93 percent over this year's rate of $1350, and the room and 10 meal plan will be $1400, a 6.06 percent increase over this year's $320 rate. Students selecting the room only option will pay $745, an increase of 4.93 percent over last year's rate of $710. Single room occupants will pay an extra charge of $400, a 6.67 percent increase over this year's fee of $375.

In presenting the plan to the Board of Regents, EMU President James H. Brickley noted that the increases will allow the University to continue existing programs and services and provide the continuance of the current practice of using all maintenance reserve monies for physical improvements. He said that the fee increase is in response to inflationary costs such as the 6.5 percent cost increase in food, the 27 percent increase in water-sewer costs, the 33 1/3 percent increase in fuel and electricity expenses and the 10 percent increase in telephone costs.

No change in the rates for the Brown-Munson single student apartments was approved.

Rent for married student apartments will be raised a uniform $3 a month regardless of the size of the apartment. President Brickley said the modest increases were designed to off-set some of the inflationary costs, although the percentage of increase, an average of 2.18 percent, is less than half the increase in rising utility costs.

"Though the rates we recommend do not permit any significant program expansions," President Brickley told the Regents, "they do permit continuation of programs and services and continuation of physical building improvements. And in our judgment, these rate recommendations will place us in a relatively good competitive position with our sister institutions, leaving us in the same relative position, cost wise, as we were this past year."

Correction

Due to the early deadlines of Focus EMU (all copy must be received at the printer by Monday evening for the following Monday's issue), it was incorrectly reported in the March 22 issue that the Faculty Affairs Committee met and discussed a number of items. The committee did not meet and its business has been postponed to the next regularly scheduled meeting April 20.

Bicentennial Notes

Reflection

From The First 100 Years - Michigan State Normal College:

"A college health service exists primarily to care for the aches and pains, bumps and bruises that student flesh is heir to, but more than that it is an educational institution, dedicated to training the student-patient in knowledge of the rules of health. In 1910 a room in Welch Hall was given to student health, and a nurse, Miss Emma Cross, was employed to take charge of it. In 1913 a house on Perrin Street (the present Home Economics house) was obtained for a health cottage. Upon Miss Cross' departure for the army in 1916, Mrs. Matilda Robinson became the nurse in charge.

"Since 1917 the name of Dr. Glendine Snow has been almost synonymous with health service at the College. While a student at the medical school of the University, she came over to help with physical testing - at that time given only to those taking physical education. Upon her graduation she took charge of the health service and until 1947 devoted her seemingly untiring energies night or day - often both - to safeguarding the health of students.

"The new building on Cross Street is one of her heritages of the WPA. It was completed in 1939 with nine hospital beds and eight more for emergency. Since the small pox epidemic of 1918 there has been no serious health trouble at the College, but more than once all seventeen beds have been filled by minor scourages of the flu.

"The Health Service has been from the outset a member of the American Student Association."

CENTER OF EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES

Women in Higher Education Administration

Hannelore B. Rader, orientation librarian in the Center of Educational Resources, has prepared a selected annotated bibliography on Women in Higher Education Administration covering the period from 1969-1975. Some older items have been included because of their particular relevant value for this topic. The National Association for women deans, administrators and counselors will distribute this bibliography to its membership.

Many of the articles included in this bibliography are summaries of studies and surveys of women administrators in academe. They indicate that a very low percentage of top academic administrative positions are held by women (2% nation-wide in 1973-74) and that many of the positions held by women are in smaller private, religious or women's colleges. Furthermore, many of the women administrators in higher education are in supportive positions where they are given staff responsibilities rather than policy-making ones. Such positions would include associate and assistant deans, program directors, etc.

Many reasons are cited for these findings, such as women do not actively seek administrative positions, search committees and hiring administrators are not aware of qualified women, women have no role model to follow in order to prepare themselves for such positions, and women are often discriminated against because of stereotyping.

Some of the articles address themselves to characteristics and qualification which women administrators should possess. Findings in this area indicate that both characteristics and qualifications for women administrators are similar to those for men administrators. These qualifications include a doctorate in higher education, management and budgetary skills, sensitivity, ability to work with people, creativity and so on. However, it would add another dimension to administration if women could also apply humaneness and gentleness to such positions.

The majority of the authors advocate changes through education in order to prepare both women and men for future roles in society and leadership positions.

Copies of this bibliography are available from Prof. Rader.
