New teacher certification program to be offered

One of the advantages of the holiday season is that it allows us time to focus our attention on things of a spiritual nature that we often neglect because of our busy schedules. This holiday season we hope you enjoy the company of your families and friends and rekindle the sense of humanity that binds us all together.

From our family to you and yours, we would like to wish everyone a joyous holiday season and a happy, prosperous new year.

Warmest holiday wishes,
Dr. and Mrs. John W. Porter and Family

Eastern's College of Education will begin a new teacher certification program for post graduate students in January 1984.

The program will emphasize certification for teachers of science and mathematics at the secondary level, although other disciplines may be incorporated.

Dr. W. Scott Westerman, dean of the College of Education, explained that the need for this program arose from the continued need for science and math teachers in secondary schools. He believes the shortage of teachers in these disciplines is a result of educators being drawn away from teaching toward higher paying career opportunities, coupled with negative perceptions about secondary school teaching in general.

Eastern's program will consist of sequenced, packaged courses, scheduled in the evening. Participating post graduates will progress through the program as a group.

Westerman said the program is for "mid-career persons who are reconsidering their career commitments. We're looking for the mature person in the workplace," he added. He described the program applicants as people working in some related field, such as accounting or another math area.

Currently, the program consists of a minimum of 28 credit hours and a maximum of 30 credit hours.

Westerman said the maximum number of students the program can accept per semester is 20-25, and the college is aiming toward this number for preliminary enrollment in January. Because the students move through the program in a group, the college can accept 25 more applicants each semester.

The first cycle of the program will begin in January 1984 and will continue in the spring semester. The group will student teach to complete the requirements for certification in fall, 1984.

Persons interested in enrolling in this program should contact Eastern's College of Education at 7-3260.

Focus on Staff

Lewis, Spieser give students a 'head start'

Hildred Lewis and Sharman Spieser teach kids to become students. Lewis is project director and Spieser is associate director for EMU's Project Upward Bound. With its headquarters in Goodison Hall, Upward Bound is a program that gives high school students the skills needed to continue their education beyond the 12th grade.

"We give program opportunities to people with ability who usually wouldn't do anything academically beyond high school because there's not enough money or because they're not encouraged," said Lewis.

To qualify for Project Upward Bound assistance, student from Ypsilanti, Willow Run and Ann Arbor high schools either come from limited-income families or first-generation households. By the program's definition, a first-generation household is one where neither parent has a degree.

One of 13 programs in the state, Upward Bound depends on individual school districts to identify the freshmen, sophomores and juniors who qualify.

Upward Bound does counsel seniors about SAT tests and college applications, as well as provides financial assistance, but it is primarily a two-part program budgeted for 65 underclassmen.

"We try to make these kids independent through classes and counseling during the school year, and through our summer program, which is more like an actual college situation," Lewis explained. Besides teaching study habits, the program emphasizes social things, "like being part of a group larger than a family, or getting along with people even though their personal habits are different than yours," he added.

"Our students get a lot of individual attention from teachers and Upward Bound counselors," said Spieser. "Our math and science classes are restricted to 15 students per class. But it takes self-discipline to make it. If they skip one class during our summer school, they don't get credit for it."

Lewis described the summer school's intense daily schedule. It didn't allow for any wasted time.

Lewis and Spieser agree that government paperwork is the most difficult part of their jobs. "We must record everything we do, and we must use numbers to show our effectiveness," said Spieser. "I sometimes wish we could use a videotape to send to Washington or that '60 Minutes' would sit in on our classes."

Lewis cited policies as making the job more difficult. "Each new administration changes the emphasis, and the forms we fill out. Sometimes the wrong questions are asked."

But both agreed that local support from the public schools, the University and President John Porter is exceptional. Lewis, who's been with Upward Bound since 1971, and Spieser, who started in 1977, mirror each other's feelings when describing the satisfaction their work brings them.

"On Tuesdays and Thursdays after school, when I see those kids working at their lives—when I can feel I'm teaching them to teach themselves—that's when I get that hit," said Spieser.

"You're not with them every day, so when you see them fumbling and then later see their self-concepts change, that's when you know you've had an impact," added Lewis.

Spieser grew up in Detroit and worked toward a degree in communications at Michigan State. She dropped out for a year and got a job as a secretary with the East Lansing Public Schools. "That's when I got excited about education," she said. So she returned to MSU, finished her degree and earned a teaching certificate. Eventually, she earned a master's degree in educational leadership at Eastern.

Her quest for a teaching job led her to substitute teach in schools in East Lansing, Ann Arbor and in prisons before working for Upward Bound.

"I taught for a year at the men's prison camps in the Michigan prison system and for a summer in the women's prison," said Spieser. "Of my substitute teaching, working in the prisons was the easiest! The prisoners wouldn't take a chance on being written up. They could lose weekends with their families. It could affect their paroles. There was no trouble."

Once, a prisoner in the men's camp asked Spieser why she taught there. When she told him how hard it was to get a permanent teaching position, he suggested she try the Detroit schools. "When I told him I'd be afraid to teach in Detroit, he and the others laughed pretty hard," she said.

Lewis grew up in Memphis, Mich., a tiny place west of Port Huron, and was a fine high school football player. Armed with an academic scholarship, he looked over several colleges and chose Eastern because it had an "honest atmosphere." At EMU, he earned his bachelor's degree in physical education and math and earned eight varsity letters in track and football.

Upon graduation, he worked as a teacher and counselor in Clarenceville, Ypsilanti, and at Eastern before starting with Upward Bound.

Lewis' special perspective in working with high school kids was pointed out by Spieser. "Hildred is very credible to many students because of his professional athletic experiences," she said.

With some prodding, Lewis described his football career, which was shortened by injuries, with the San Francisco 49ers and the Toronto Argonauts: "I wasn't exceptionally talented. I learned the game and the weaknesses of the player across from me," he said.

His experience as a professional athlete put Lewis in tune with the "media-induced" career motivation of some of his students. "We never tell them they can't be a doctor or a basketball player, we just point out the statistics and alternatives." —BY RON BERBY

Honor Sections

Winter semester will see the expansion of the honors sections to nine different undergraduate courses, covering six departments. Courses offering honor sections are designated by section numbers 090 - 099. Any student with a combined GPA of 3.3 or higher may register for these honors courses. Beginning in the fall semester, 1984, only students admitted to the EMU Honors Program will be allowed to elect honors coursework. Page 5 of the Winter Class Schedule gives a complete listing of honor courses. For more information contact the University Honors Program at 7-2178.

Graduating with Academic Distinction

To graduate with distinction, the following GPA requirements must be met.

|--------------------|-------------------|
| 1) Summa cum laude | (3.90 - 4.00 GPA) |
| 2) Magna cum laude | (3.70 - 3.89 GPA) |
| 3) cum laude | (3.50 - 3.69 GPA) |

The appropriate designation will appear both on the student's diploma and academic transcript. The grade point average is computed by combining all coursework taken at EMU and at any other college or university from which transfer hours are earned.

Upcoming Deadline Dates

Just a reminder that Dec. 14 is the last day for students to initiate a total withdrawal from the University. It is also the final day for students to remove PASS/FAIL option for a letter grade.

Instructional Support Center Tutoring

Free peer tutoring is offered by the Instructional Support Center in many undergraduate subject areas. Faculty and staff are encouraged to inform their students that help is available for those needing it, especially as final exams near. For more information concerning the tutoring program contact ISC at 7-1380.

Evening Advising

Undergraduate evening advising by the Academic Services Center will end Dec. 20, the final day of exams. ASC's evening services will begin again for winter semester on Jan. 9, 1984.

Campus Commentary

Although most crimes are against property, rather than against people, a substantial number of crimes involve robbery, purse snatching or other forms of physical or sexual assault. In order to reduce your chances of becoming a victim of crime against person, you must be cautious in your residence, in your car and on the street.

What can you do to decrease your chances of being assaulted, short of locking yourself in your residence and not allowing anyone to enter? There are several things available that do not cost money, are effective, and can be learned and practiced by everyone.

When on the street, don't make yourself a target by dangling your purse from your wrist. A conspicuous display of cash or a bulging wallet in your back pocket also can make you a target.

While walking on the street, be wise! Stay out of high crime areas and stick to well lighted and well traveled parts of campus or town. Avoid walking by doorways, shrubbery and any other dark places where someone might hide. Never carry a weapon. It can easily be turned against you.

If you think you are being followed, don't go directly home, head towards the closest well lighted area immediately and then go to an open store, gas station or dorm. Whenever you must walk outside at night try to take a friend with you. Always act as if you know where you are going or maybe meeting someone. This may serve as a deterrent.

If you live in an apartment house, don't go to the laundry room alone. If you are a woman, list only initial and your last name on the mail box and in the telephone directory.

Most people lock their doors when they leave home, but it is just as important to lock them when you are at home. The best lock in the world won't do any good if it is not used.

While driving, keep doors locked and windows rolled up. Check your car for uninvited passengers before you get into it and always park it in well lighted areas. NEVER PICK UP HITCHHIKERS.

Employer and Educational Institution

Participants

Several members of the faculty and staff at Eastern have been active in numerous professional activities recently.

Dr. Irene Ametrano, assistant professor in the Department of Leadership and Counseling, recently presented a program titled "Suicide: An Introduction to Assessment and Intervention" at the Michigan Personnel and Guidance Association Convention in Grand Rapids.

John E. Van Haren, head of the Art Department, recently presented a workshop in jewelry and casting techniques at the University of Texas at El Paso.

Dr. Jack D. Minzey, head of the Department of Leadership and Counseling, was the keynote speaker at the Montana State Community Education convention in Bozeman, Mont. recently. In addition, he provided in-service programs for the administration and staff of Montana State University and spoke at a meeting of the Bozeman Community Council.

Minzey also provided the keynote address at the annual State Conference for Elementary Principals in Eugene, Ore.

Dr. Janice Terry, professor of history at EMU, recently presented a paper on "Influences and Impacts of Stereotypes in Popular Literature on the Arab-Israeli Conflict" at the Inter-University Seminar on Armed Forces and Society in Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Marjorie Lansing, professor in the Department of Political Science, recently spoke to the Kennedy Space Center Federal Women's Program Working Group and the Space Coast Chapter of Federally Employed Women at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Also, Lansing has been appointed to the Charles E. Merriam Awards Selection Committee of the American Political Science Association.

Dr. Stephen Brewer, professor in the Department of Chemistry, recently presented a lecture on "Determination of Cadmium, Bismuth, Thallium, Tin and Mercury at Trace Concentrations in Highly Acidic Aqueous Microsamples by Exploding Thin Film Spectroscopy" at the Midwest Universities Analytical Chemistry Conference at Youngstown State University in Ohio.

Dr. J. Jan Jellema, assistant professor in the Department of Industrial Technology, recently presented a paper on "The Fabrication of Integrated Circuits" at the 16th annual conference of the National Association of Industrial Technology, held at Bowling Green State University.

Dr. Della Flusche, professor of history, recently returned to campus from a half-year research leave supported by a University Faculty Research Fellowship.

A specialist in the colonial history of Chile, Flusche spent her leave researching and writing a book-length manuscript comparing the changing fortunes over time of two representative families from the older and newer colonial Chilean society elites.

Dr. Jiu-hwa Lo Upshur, associate professor of history, was co-author of a new text titled "The Twentieth Century: A Brief Global History". Upshur worked with three other EMU history faculty to produce this text.

Dr. Mary Robischon, visiting professor of history, recently presented a paper titled "Skilled Craftsmen, Instruments of Skill and the Transfer of Precision from Science to Technology" at the annual meeting of the Society for the History of Technology in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Young-Iob Chung, head of the Department of Economics, recently delivered an Asia Week lecture at Carleton College in Minnesota. His lecture was titled, "The Impact of Chinese Cultural Traditions on Korea's Economic Development."

Two students sponsored by Professor of Music Emily Boyd Lowe recently received regional and international recognition. Debra Fitzgibbon, a graduate assistant in the Music Department, was one of 32 international competitors in the preliminary round of the Purcell-Britten Prize for Concert Singers in London, England. Fitzgibbon also won consecutive first place awards in the advanced women's category of the regional National Association of Teachers of Singing competition in 1981 and 1982. Lowe also sponsored John Lindsay, who recently placed third in the advanced level of the regional competition of the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

Dr. Agnes Rainwater, associate professor in the Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance Department, recently presented a paper titled "Adolescent Recreation and Alcohol Consumption" to the Research Symposium at the National Recreation and Parks Congress in Kansas City.

Dr. Michael Long, director of the Health Administration Program, has been appointed to the Research Advisory Committee of the Greater Detroit Area Health Council, Inc. The council is a coordinating body for health care delivery facilities in southeastern Michigan. The committee advises the council on the direction of its research policy.

Eleanor S. Wright, associate professor in the Department of English Language and Literature, recently received an Outstanding Campus Adviser Award at the Women in Communications Inc. National Professional Conference in Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. John Ginther, professor in the Mathematics and Computer Science Department, recently presented a lecture-demonstration titled "Computer Enrichment Topics" for school mathematics at the conference of the Michigan Council of Teacher of Mathematics in Flint.

The College of Business has contributed $1,500 to the Quirk Theater Development Campaign, purchasing a seat in the new Sponberg Theater. Business is the first of Eastern's five colleges to contribute to the campaign, which has raised $728,246.60 as of Dec. 7 toward the goal of $1.1 million. Research

Summer Research Fellowships

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the U.S. Navy are providing 10-week summer research fellowships to eligible science faculty at various NASA university centers and Naval laboratories throughout the U.S. Research projects conducted will be of mutual interest to the fellow and NASA/USN, in collaboration with a laboratory supervisor.

Fellows are selected on a national competition basis and the submission deadline is Feb. 1, 1984. Contact R. Howard at 7-3090 for information on sponsoring centers and laboratories.

Research in Humanities, Science and Technology

The National Endowment for the Humanities developed the Humanities, Science and Technology Program to support coordinated or collaborative humanities research projects designed to deepen our understanding of science and technology and their role in our culture. The program gives priority to studies of science and technology which involve the traditional humanities disciplines of history; philosophy; language, linguistics and literature; religious studies; theory, history and criticism of the arts; jurisprudence; and those aspects of the social sciences that employ historical or philosophical approaches.

The deadline for submitting proposals is March 1, 1984. Contact Cheryl Kozell at 7-3090 for further information and application materials.

December Deadline Reminders

National Institute of Justice. Classification, Prediction, Methodology Development Research Solicitation. Dec. 14th.

Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Program Fund Open Solicitation. Dec. 16th.

Agency for International Development. Omani-American Joint Commission Scholarship and Training Project. Dec. 23rd.

Extreme weather policy outlined

In cases of extreme weather conditions, the President will make the decision for any modification of class schedules and/or work schedules. In the absence of the President, the Provost will make the decision. Unless one of these officials delegates this responsibility to another individual, no other official is authorized to modify University work/class schedules.

Any alteration of class/work schedules will immediately be conveyed to the following points for information distribution:

EMU Newline.....	487-2460
EMU Department of Public Safety.....	487-1222
EMU Switchboard.....	487-1849
WEMU FM 89.1.....	487-2229

The University will also attempt to have cancellation information broadcast over local radio stations, CKLW, WJR, WAAM, etc. It is noted, however, that only the EMU offices listed above may be considered as speaking for the University.

Employees are cautioned that weather conditions may result in several alterations of work schedules ranging from cancellation of selected academic programs to a complete University shut-down. The EMU information points will be prepared to give complete information on modification of University schedules.

University employees, except teaching faculty, are subject to the following personnel policy:

Employees reporting for work on the first day of a temporary closing, occasioned by power failure, act of God, or other causes beyond the control of the University, are entitled to receive a minimum of three (3) hours pay or work on the first day of such closing. To the extent their accrued entitlements will permit, employees may use sick or annual leave for the balance of that day. Employees who do receive notice of the temporary cancellation of work schedules and do not report for work on such day, may use sick or annual leave on that day, not to exceed the extent of their accrued entitlements.

At all times (including when work schedules are cancelled) certain designated personnel are expected to report for work. For the purpose of this policy, designated employees are defined as Safety and Security Officers, Heating Plant employees, Physical Plant Maintenance employees, Food Service employees (when students are in residence), Switchboard employees and any other employees who are specifically requested to report by the President or his designee.
