Crisis Council holds first meeting

The first meeting of EMU's Crisis Council was held Thursday, Feb. 10.

Council Chairman George A. Johnston, director of planning and analysis, said he was "pleased" with the way the first meeting went. "We seem to be establishing an open environment for discussion," he said. "Committee members spoke frankly and there seemed to be a good interchange of thoughts."

The initial meeting, Johnston said, was primarily organizational. The Council reviewed the charge issue by President John W. Porter, discussed a proposed outline of its work and an outline of its final report, a proposed meeting schedule, the report presented by the state Financial Crisis Council to Gov. James J. Blanchard and the EMU Strategy Paper.

The council decided its meetings would be closed to the public and that no alternates would be selected for members unable to attend particular meetings. Johnston said he expects the council will meet approximately once each week and would issue its final report to President Porter April 11.

In his charge to the council,

Porter directed "that the Crisis Council evaluate (nine) assumptions and provide a series of alternatives that will accomplish the budget plan."

The nine assumptions he cited include:

1. the University will probably never receive all of the $6.2 million deferred;
2. the state appropriation for 1982-83 has prevented the full implementation of the Indexing Plan;
3. each deferral and executive order is weakening the long-term viability of the University;
4. the University has increased tuition 56 percent between 1979-80 and 1982-83, from $875 to $1,365;
5. an income tax increase producing $400 million in additional state revenues is probable but would still leave a $350 million deficit;
6. the state deficit results from increased expenditures of $319 million and a $382 million shortfall in taxes;
7. an income tax increase will be affected by Section 30, which allocates 40 percent of that increase to local units of government;
8. many people will become confused and angry when it is alleged that higher education received a 40 percent increase or $322 million for 1982-83;

9. reductions could leave state colleges and universities at the 1979-80 state appropriation level of $625 million.

Based upon these assumptions and realities, Porter stated that the University will have to develop a plan for a budget reduction of $2.5 million to be implemented during May, June, July and August 1983.

"Current programs and services offered by the University are based upon current enrollment levels," he said. "A limited, modest decline in enrollment is projected for 1983-84. A corresponding reduction in course offerings has already been planned. Further reductions not based upon enrollments serviced but upon financial exigencies are not in the best interest of the University until a real decline in enrollment occurs. Accordingly, permanent reductions in programs and services are not viable alternatives to achieve the budget plan."

The next meeting of the Crisis Council will be Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Faculty Council seeks representatives

Faculty members interested in representing their colleges on Faculty Council are encouraged to run for the terms opening in 1983.

This year the number of members to be elected is:

- College of Arts and Sciences — 3 members for two-year terms and 1 member for a one-year term
- College of Business — 1 member for a two-year term
- College of Education — 1 member for a two-year term
- College of Human Services — 1 member for a two-year term
- Center of Educational Resources — 1 member for a two-year term

This election will bring the Faculty Council into compliance with the 1982 AAUP-EMU Contract.

To run for a position on the Faculty Council, a faculty member must be nominated. You may nominate yourself. Nominations are by petition; petition forms are available from your department secretary or from the Faculty Council office (334 Goodison, phone 7-0196).

Petitions may be signed only by faculty members as defined in the AAUP-EMU Contract, Article III.A. A faculty member may sign no more petitions than the number of seats up for election in his/her college (e.g., a faculty member in the College of Arts and Sciences could sign the petitions of no more than four nominees, or a faculty member in the College of Business could sign the petition of no more than one nominee).

Nominating petitions must be received by 5 p.m., Friday, Feb. 18. Send petitions to Margaret Best, 217c Library.

Balloting will be by mail in March. Candidates receiving a plurality of votes cast in each college will be elected.

Porter addresses national student aid committee

University President John W. Porter recently spoke to the Subcommittee on Sources of Funds of the National Commission on Student Financial Assistance at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Porter was invited by Congressman William Ford and was the only college president who addressed the group, which included senators, congressmen and members of the National Commission on Student Financial Assistance. Excerpts from his speech follow:

"We in Michigan, and our colleagues at institutions of higher education throughout the United States, are immensely concerned about the trend which has been manifested by the Federal Government during the past 24 months. . . .

"At Eastern Michigan University, our costs have increased by 31.9 percent during this period while Federal Title IV revenue to our Student Financial Assistance programs has remained virtually unchanged. Thus, factoring in inflation, our students have had to absorb a "real" dollar cut in assistance of about 40 percent. . . .

"The education of our youth and the retraining of our work force is vital to our nation's future, and yet there has been an awesome erosion in the amount of federal support for higher education. This indirect reduction of access to higher education is occurring at an alarming rate. . . .

"When Congress passed the Middle Income Student Assistance Act of 1980, it was viewed by all involved as broadening the access to all institutions of post-secondary education throughout the United States. With the relaxing of federal criteria governing eligibility for Pell (formerly Basic) Grants, Guaranteed Student Loans, Supplemental Grants, College Work-Study and National Direct Student Loans, all of America's students would be able to attend the post-secondary institutions of their choice. . . .

"The Middle Income Student Assistance Act has now become "wishful thinking." The reality is that if middle income students are aided to the full extent of their eligibility, the poorer students must suffer. . . .

"Since 1981, the federal role in providing access to higher education for the needy has been drastically reduced and dramatically altered:

Campus Capsules

Loren Estleman to speak here

Loren D. Estleman, a successful novelist and 1974 graduate of EMU, will discuss his work Tuesday, Feb. 22 at noon in the Tower Room of McKenny Union.

Estleman has published 12 novels, with two more scheduled for publication later this year. His works include his best sellers "Sherlock Holmes Vs. Dracula" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Holmes" and also "Motor City Blue" and "The Midnight Man," both named Notable Books by the New York Times Book Review. In addition, one of his Westerns, "Aces and Eight," was awarded the 1981 Golden Spur Award for Best Western Historical Novel from the Western Writers of America.

Estleman's lecture is sponsored by the Office of Campus Life as part of its 1983 Lunch and Lecture Series. It is free and open to the public.

Art prof. to discuss lithograph exhibit

Robert Chew, associate professor of art, will lecture at Ford Gallery tonight.

Chew will lecture on the work processes of the highly technical field of Lithography.

The "Lithographs Printed by . . ." show currently being exhibited at the Gallery was coordinated by Chew and includes works by artists and printers from the prestigious Tamarind Institute of New Mexico's class of 1982.

The lecture begins at 7 p.m. in Ford Gallery.

For more information, call the Art Department at 7-1268.

Memorial service scheduled for Lloyd W. Olds

Former track athletes at EMU are invited to attend a memorial service for Dr. Lloyd W. Olds, former Olympic track coach and the man for whom the University's new student recreation center is named, Sunday, Feb. 20 at 2 p.m. in the fifth floor lounge of the Olds Student Recreation Center.

The service is being sponsored by the E Club.

Olds, a former EMU track coach and emeritus faculty member, died Thursday, Dec. 2 in Laguna Hills, Calif., following a brief illness. He was 90.

For details on the memorial service, contact Ralph Gilden at 434-2790.

Students to offer free income tax clinic

A free income tax clinic for low income and elderly residents of the Ypsilanti-Ann Arbor area will be offered by the Accounting Club and Beta Alpha Psi honorary accounting fraternity through April 8.

The clinic, located on the second floor of Goodison Hall in the Conference Room (227), will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday with Saturday hours available by appointment. The clinic will be staffed by junior and senior accounting majors in the College of Business.

Area residents who need help filing their income tax forms should bring W-2 forms, bank statements, dividend sheets and itemized lists with them when they come to the clinic.

For further information, contact Laurie Crawford at 484-1075 or call the tax clinic at 7-1473.

Scherer to speak at colloquium

The EMU chapter of Phi Kappa Phi honor society will hold its second Colloquium of the 1982-83 academic year on Wednesday, Feb. 16 at 3 p.m. in the Faculty Room of McKenny Union.

Dr. Lester B. Scherer, professor of History and Philosophy, will speak on "Research in Afro-American Religious History." Scherer will explore special problems in investigating the cultural history of Black Americans.

The public is welcome to attend.

EMU's Speech and Hearing Clinic gives quality care

Communicating is something most of us do so effortlessly that we often take it for granted.

But, what about those with severe speech or hearing difficulties for whom even a simple telephone conversation can be the source of tremendous panic, frustration and embarrassment?

At Eastern, many such people find the help and understanding they need through the Speech and Hearing Clinic located in the lower level of the Rackham Building.

The clinic offers care to a variety of patients. According to Marjorie Chamberlain, certified speech pathologist and coordinator of the clinic, children, stroke victims and the elderly all benefit from the clinic. Current patients range from six months to nearly 80 years old.

Services include hearing evaluations, consultation in the selection of hearing aids and speech pathology.

Therapy, Chamberlain explained, is as individual as the patients themselves.

"Therapy depends on so many things," she said. "The patient's personality, the severity of the problem and his needs for survival and rehabilitation are all taken into consideration."

The sessions are administered by EMU students in speech pathology under the supervisory of department faculty.

"Our function here is actually two-fold," Chamberlain said. "We provide supervised practical experience for our students while at the same time providing expert clinical services to the community."

The clinic is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association. Few clinics meet the stringent standards it sets. Although 250 university-affiliated clinics exist in the U.S., the association has bestowed only 59 with the level of accreditation it has awarded EMU's facility.

A unique aspect of the clinic is that it accepts patients who come in on their own as well as those who are referred by doctors, schools or families.

Also unique is the fact that most children and many adults at the clinic are scheduled for therapy for two hours per day, four days per week, as opposed to the usual one hour per week that many other clinics are equipped to provide. This intense therapy enhances each patient's chances for successful treatment.

"We are able to have this type of therapy in part because of the Michigan Mandatory Special Education Laws," Chamberlain said. "These laws say school districts must provide special education for children from birth to age 25. Many of these children and young adults are bussed to the clinic under contractual agreement with the schools.

"Our goal," she added, "is not to 'cure' the speech and hearing problems, but to enable the children to function well in their own school systems."

At the other end of the spectrum, the clinic has an outreach program to provide its services to geriatric patients.

"Since the loss of hearing capabilities often goes hand in hand with aging, we often go to homes and facilities for the aged and provide hearing testing and evaluation," Chamberlain said.

"Our most difficult job in dealing with patients of any age is to maintain a 'professional detachment.' It is so easy to become too involved and care too much. When this happens, therapy sometimes suffers," Chamberlain added.

The clinic is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Therapy sessions are held Monday through Thursday, while Fridays are reserved for initial diagnostic evaluations.

EMU faculty, staff, students and their immediate families are not charged for services.

For further information on the Speech and Hearing Clinic, call 7-4410.

Detroit distributor addresses Business College

"We are using computers extensively at Detroit Ball Bearing (DBB). We control the computer so that the entire company is positioned to give maximum service to our customers at the lowest possible cost," said J. Michael Moore, president and chief executive officer of Detroit Ball Bearing Co., Feb. 9, in a speech to the College of Business.

Moore, a native of Michigan and business graduate from Washington University, opened his speech thanking and acknowledging the hospitality of the dean and staff of the College of Business.

While discussing what an industrial distributor does in this complex world of technology, Moore said, "I think there is a trend. The industrial society is shifting to an information society because of the rapidity and complexity at which the technology is moving. Even the personal computers will not be able to keep up with it."

After showing the film, "Bearing Specialist," and a slide presentation, "Success Through Service," Moore said, "The most important ingredient in all business is people and through the efforts of many dedicated people we have been able to use technology to satisfy the changing demands of our customers for more and better services. Our marketing strategy has been to position the entire company to give maximum service to our customers at the lowest rate."

Moore, a member of the Advisory Board of EMU's Business School, told the packed audience that DBB believes in the strategic application of computer technology to provide the ability to increase customer service through improved inventory control, enhanced information handling and increased worker productivity.

He said that his company provides instant back-order information, educational assistance and customer service benefit through data processing. Furthermore, DBB also provides teleprocessing in all remote locations which helps in instant stock status and systems contract capabilities. It also helps in pursuing direct order entry programs. DBB has a pilot program in Ypsilanti, where the customer's order is handled through computers, Moore said.

In answering a question from a student about the "Robot Age" and how it might affect the industry, Moore said it is a "good news and bad news situation." Even though the robots are electronically operated, they are still mechanically equipped, which is good news for their business.

When asked how competitive the job market is for students coming out of school, he said his company looks for mechanical aptitude, desire and the ability to work.

Co-op job placements increase

Since receiving a federal grant from the Department of Education, Title VIII funds, Cooperative Education has become an important academic program here at Eastern. All five colleges are included in the grant and have specific goals for each academic year.

Recently, Dr. Joseph Barbeau of Northeastern University was on campus to conduct an evaluation of the program. Dr. Barbeau emphasized the importance of administrative and faculty participation to insure a successful program. Many faculty members have indeed become involved with the program and have provided immense support for its activities.

Some faculty serve as faculty sponsors to students on Co-op placements. As sponsors, they assist students in developing appropriate learning objectives for their job placement, make one on-site visit if possible, and issue a grade and/or credit at the end of the placement.

The grant provides funding to be used as incentive stipends to faculty sponsors for their assistance to students, and faculty receive a stipend for each student at the end of the placement.

In addition to acting as faculty sponsors, many administrators and faculty members have provided contacts from within their professional networks that have resulted in job placements for Co-op students, and the number of students placed has doubled since last year.

The program is assisted by a Co-op Advisory Board which includes the following faculty members as well as representatives from business, industry, and students: Dr. Elwood J.C. Kureth, head, Geography/Geology and Physics/Astronomy Department and Dr. Raymond E. Schaub, Foreign Languages and Bilingual Studies Department.

A special task force also has been formed to develop strategies for increasing the number of Co-op employers. The strategy task force organized by Jerry Cushing, personnel resource programs manager, International Business Machines, included: Maury Kittle, advisory marketing support representative, International Business Machines; George Albert, manager, Commercial Accounting Center, General Motors Corporation; Frank Hamer, operations manager, Environmental Research Group; William McAninch, director of compensation and benefits, Ford Aero Space and Communications Corporation; Phillip Meagher, executive director, Southfield Chamber of Commerce; Antoinette Schiesler, Director, Office of Research Development; Rita Abent, director, Student Publications and Dr. Jane K. Moehle, director, Cooperative Education.

In their planning sessions, the group identified future goals for the program and discussed problems involved in attaining those goals. As a result of their discussions, projects were agreed upon to help resolve the problems and to expand Cooperative Education opportunities for more students.

An Affirmative Action Equal Opportunity Employer and Educational Institution

Participants

Several members of Eastern's faculty and staff have been active in professional activities recently.

Ronda Glikin, assistant professor in the Center of Educational Resources, has had a bibliography titled "Women and Credit" published in the Readers Advisory Service Selected Topical Booklists. Her name was printed incorrectly in the Feb. 8 issue of Focus EMU.

Dr. Donna M. Schmitt, associate professor in the Department of Leadership and Counseling and director of the Center for Community Education, was re-elected chairperson of the Washtenaw County Community Education Administrators' Association.

The association is a professional development and problem-solving group composed of community education professionals from each of the 10 school districts in Washtenaw County and from Cleary College, Washtenaw Community College and EMU.

Janice Holm Lloyd, associate director for inservice education in the Michigan Consumer Education Center, recently published a handbook titled "Consumer and Economic Education Recommendations for Policymakers."

The handbook was distributed to more than 1,000 educational administrators, state legislators, and others interested in strengthening school consumer and economic education programs.

Mary Ann Watson, a lecturer in the Department of Communication and Theatre Arts, will deliver a paper titled "Children's Programming: An Industry Peace Offering to the New Frontier" at the fifth annual conference of the American Culture Association in Wichita, Kan.

The paper is based on her doctoral dissertation which examines commercial television from 1961-63. Research for the study was supported by a pre-doctoral fellowship from the Rackham School of Graduate Studies of the University of Michigan.

Dr. Peter L. Clancey, director of the Office of Community Education Research in the Department of Leadership and Counseling, recently published a book titled "Nineteen Improving Schools and Why."

The book is a study 19 elementary schools whose pupils improved substantially in their performance on standardized test over a three-year period.

Dr. Wallace D. LaBenne, professor of educational psychology in the Department of Teacher Education, has been accepted for membership in the American Association of Professional Hypnotherapists.

In addition, an article by LaBenne titled "The Bicameral Mind" has been accepted for publication in the association's official publication, Hypnotherapy Today.

Dr. Marcello Truzzi, head of the Department of Sociology, participated in a panel on science fiction and the occult at "Confusion 101," a science fiction convention held at the Plymouth Hilton Hotel in Plymouth.

The convention was sponsored by the Ann Arbor Science Fiction Association, Inc.

Dr. Marvin Pasch, head of the Department of Teacher Education, and Rosella Bannister, director of the Michigan Consumer Education Center, recently co-authored an article titled "Consumer Education in Step with High School Curriculum Reform" which appeared in "Concerns," the official newsletter of the Consumer Education Resource Network.

In addition, Pasch authored a research paper titled "Cleveland Urban Learning Community: An Evaluation Report" which was accepted for inclusion in the ERIC Clearinghouse on Urban Education.

Dr. Ronald M. Scott, professor in the Department of Chemistry, recently presented a paper titled "Bonded Stationary Phases: An Overview" at the Third Biennial Symposium on Advances in Thin Layer Chromatography held in Parsippany, N.J.

Carolyn Kirkendall, director of the National LOEX Library Instruction Clearinghouse located in EMU's Center of Educational Resources, has been appointed bibliographic instruction liaison officer for the Association of College and Research Libraries, a division of the American Library Association.

The liaison project has been established to provide information concerning academic librarianship to professional and scholarly organizations and individuals involved with higher education, with the major objective of planning and providing library-related programs at association conferences, meetings and conventions.

Kirkendall also is co-author of a chapter titled "Bibliographic Instruction" in the newly published book "The Service Imperative," published by Libraries, Unlimited.

Joan Laird, assistant professor in the Department of Social Work, presented a paper titled "The Meaning of Family Rituals and Their Therapeutic Use in Clinical Practice" at the National Association of Social Workers Clinical Social Workers Conference in Washington, D.C. recently.

Also, Laird recently completed a book which is being published by the Free Press and will be available in the fall of 1983. The book, titled "Family-Centered Social Work Practice," is co-authored by Ann Hartman, professor at the University of Michigan School of Social Work.

Kaaren Brown, assistant professor in the Department of Social Work, recently gave a presentation titled "Bachelor of Social Work Program Commonalities Across the State of Michigan" at the Michigan Council on Human Services Education fall conference in Lansing.

George Mink, assistant professor in the Department of Social Work, recently was appointed to the Personnel Committee for the Michigan American Friends Service Committee and currently is preparing a manual on volunteer programs using senior citizens as coaches with parents of children in foster care.

NSF Budget for 1984

The National Science Foundation has announced its budget for FY 1984 which shows an increase of $195.1 million or 18 percent above the FY 1983 level.

New programs which will be particularly interest to EMU faculty and staff include:

- 1) substantial increases in research instrumentation programs;
- 2) a Presidential Young Investigator Research Awards program;
- 3) a $3 million program to encourage independent faculty research in the nation's predominantly undergraduate colleges; and
- 4) A Pre-College Teacher Training program in science, technology and mathematics.

For further information on these new program initiatives, contact R. Howard at 7-3090. Summer Seminars for College Teachers

The National Endowment for the Humanities is sponsoring Summer Seminars for teachers in two, four and five-year colleges. The seminars provide teachers with a unique opportunity for advanced study or research in their own field or in other fields related to their interests. Those selected to participate in the seminars will work under the direction of a distinguished scholar in an area of mutual interest; they will discuss a body of common readings with colleagues in the seminar, prepare a written report and pursue an individual project of their own choosing and design.

Applicants must have completed their professional training by April 1, 1983. Although an applicant need not necessarily have an advanced degree in order to participate, neither candidates for degrees nor persons seeking support for work leading toward a degree are eligible.

Copies of a brochure describing the content of each seminar are available from ORD. Guidelines and detailed information on individual seminars can be obtained by writing the seminar director listed in the brochure. The deadline for submitting applications is April 1, 1983. Call Cheryl Kozell at 7-3090 to request the Summer Seminar brochure.

Deadline Reminders:

National Institute of Mental Health, National Institute of Mental Health Research Programs, March 1, 1983.

Department of Housing and Urban Development, Housing Survey Small Grant Program, March 4, 1983.

Department of Agriculture, Biological Nitrogen Fixation, Feb. 26, 1983.

Department of Agriculture, Photosynthesis, Feb. 26, 1983.

FRESHMAN POWER—Earl Jones, shown here leading the pack in a 600-yard dash earlier this winter, may only be a freshman but he has already made his mark on the local track scene. students have been scheduled for total elimination. . . .

Beginning in 1981, students 18 to 21 years old lost their Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and therefore lost medical coverage. Thus, the financial need of this clientele increased significantly. . . .

Within the past 24 months, federal rule changes to Social Services programs can preclude college study if class attendance is viewed as excessive absence from a child. . . . Many recipients are women with dependent children who enrolled in college in order to escape the welfare system. Education is the opportunity to positively change their future. . . .

"Our minority and our poor students are in serious trouble. Research by the United Negro College Fund indicates that 90 percent of all minority students attending colleges and universities receive some form of financial aid. Additionally, 51 percent of all college students require assistance. The median income for the families of minority students was less than $12,000 in 1979, while the national median income of the families of all college students was $22,000. What a staggering contrast! Yet the course we are now pursuing dictates that the neediest students will not receive the limited aid available. . . .

"Our colleges and universities remain the basic institutions in our society which have the range of resources equal to the scope of the problems we are faced with today. We have, within our colleges and universities, capabilities which can make a vast difference as our nation faces the future."

The deadline date for copy is 5 p.m. Tuesdays for next week's issue. FOCUS EMU is published for faculty and staff every Tuesday during the fall and winter semesters and semi-monthly on Tuesdays during the spring and summer by the Office of Information Services.

ISC Support

February is a good time to send students to the Instructional Support Center. They may receive help in their studies, in test-taking, and in other academic skills. Staff members there report that student use has been light this semester, in spite of the number of excellent support programs they offer. The center is located in 102 Library and offers both day and evening hours.

New Student Advising

Academic Services Center will begin advising new students for Summer and Fall beginning Feb. 21. Any departments having updates on programs or other pertinent information may wish to get that to us by Feb. 21.

Faculty Advising Assistance

February presents a good opportunity for faculty to contact Academic Services with any questions. If you would like any assistance in preparing for the advising season ahead, let us know. We'd love to help, so give us a call on the HOTLINE.
