Faculty ratifies salary package

The EMU faculty has ratified the union-negotiated salary package, tentatively agreed to on Friday, Oct. 28, by a vote of 132 to 60.

The salary agreement, which was the only part of the faculty's two year contract subject to negotiation, gives the faculty an eight percent increase in salary. The increase is retroactive to the start of the 1983 fall semester. The retroaction portion of the eight percent increase will be distributed by separate check to the faculty no later than Dec. 8, 1983.

The agreement was extended through Aug. 31, 1985 and provides for a six percent increase for the 1984-85 school year plus an additional increase of up to two percent as indexed by the total revenue received by the University between July 1, 1983 and June 30, 1985.

At the meeting held by the AAUP to discuss the tentative agreement Monday, Oct. 31, some faculty members voiced concern about the lack of provisions for correcting pay inequities between long-time employees and new hires.

An independent consulting firm is scheduled to examine the University's faculty salaries and offer the administration recommendations based on its findings. However, the current contract makes no specific references to, or demands upon recommendations resulting from this activity.

The salary package is expected to cost the University approximately $1.28 million.

United Way at 97% and still counting

EMU's United Way Campaign for 1983 finished just short of the institutional goal of $38,000 with some pledges still expected. Total pledges received by Friday, Nov. 4 totaled $36,862 or 97 percent of the goal, according to John C. Fountain, vice president for University Relations and chairman of this year's drive.

"It appears at this late date that we will come very close to or equal the amount generated in the 1982 campaign," Fountain said. "To date, we have received $37,001 in pledges, which is just $342 short of the record total of $37,343 received last year," he added.

"The Division of Academic Affairs, under the leadership of Dr. Scott Westerman, dean of the College of Education, raised more than 70 percent of the total amount. The only other division to show an increase over 1982 was University Relations, under the leadership of Kathleen Tinney, director of Information Services and Publications.

The breakdown by division is as follows: Academic Affairs with total pledges of $26,139, $243 more than the 1982 campaign (Scott Westerman, division chair); Business and Finance, total pledges of $2,293, $116 under 1982 (John Hayes, division chair); Executive Offices with pledges totaling $1,361, $251 under 1982 (Roy Wilbanks, division chair); Emeritus Faculty with total pledges of $1,975, $35 under 1982 (Jim Brunner, chair); Student Affairs, total pledges of $2,864, $873 under 1982 (Bette White, division chair) and University Relations with pledges totaling $2,107, $538 over 1982.

"Daily, we are receiving late gifts and this, coupled with the mail campaign to Emeritus Faculty, would seem to indicate that last years total will be met and perhaps even surpassed," Fountain said.

Policy revision

The University Board of Regents has approved a revision to the endowment fund investment policy, which would allow employment of the concept of mutual fund market timing. The Board heard a presentation on this subject by Mr. Stephen Shellans of Greenwich Monitrend Corporation in its Feb. 16, 1983 meeting.

Under existing policy, the entire endowment fund is invested in four mutual funds:

1. The Common Fund for Short-Term Investments (money market fund),
2. The Common Fund for Bond Investments,
3. The Common Fund for Equity (stocks) Investment, and
4. The Pioneer Fund (a stock fund).

Approximately one-third of the entire endowment fund is invested in bonds; approximately one-third is invested in each of the two stock funds; and the money market fund is used primarily to facilitate moves into and out of the other funds.

Under the heading of MANAGEMENT DELEGATION, new wording is added to describe the market timing advising service (Greenwich Monitrend) which would be given sole discretion to move dollars between the two Fidelity funds. Approximately one-third of the total endowment fund would be controlled in this manner.

The next most significant policy change is the elimination of the Pioneer Fund, which would be replaced by the Fidelity Asset Investment Trust Fund (a no-load stock fund), and the Fidelity Cash Reserves Fund (a second money market fund).

Other changes approved fall in the categories of housekeeping and minor updating.

Women's studies week celebrated

The following presentations are offered as part of Women's Studies Week at EMU. On Wednesday, Nov. 9, Dr. Nadean Bishop, associate professor of English language and literature, will give a lecture at noon in the Founders Room of McKenny Union. "Is Sex Sacred?" will be her topic.

Senator Lana Pollack will speak on "Women and Politics - How Can We Be More Effective," on Thursday, Nov. 10 at 3 p.m. in Roosevelt Auditorium. There will be a reception immediately following the speech in the Susan Burson Room.

The presentations are co-sponsored by the Women's Association and the Women's Commission. For more information, call 7-1177.

Campus Capsules

Healthline Presents Fitness Workshop

A workshop on warm-up and cool-down programs will be offered by Healthline. The workshop is part of a series sponsored by the Rec/IM Department and Snow Health Center. The workshop will cover the purpose and importance of a warm-up, the benefits of a cool-down program and include demonstrations of various warm-ups and cool-downs.

The workshop meets Tuesday, Nov. 15 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Olds Conference Room of the Rec/IM building. Call 7-1338 or 7-1122 for more information.

Book Returns Due

The University Bookstore would like to remind faculty that Fall '83 book returns to publishers will begin in November. All books not adopted for Winter 1984, and books we have not been informed were adopted for first use after Nov. 1st, 1983 for this Fall term will be returned. Please share this information with your students.

Ypsilanti Adult Ed. Provides ESL Assistance

Ypsilanti Adult Education, in cooperation with EMU, provides study skills assistance in English as a Second Language (ESL). The ESL/Cultural Interpretation program offers individualized instruction to non-native speaking EMU students who are enrolled in ESL, English, or literature classes. Students will receive help on their classroom assignments, compositions, conversations, pronunciation, English grammar, and study skills.

The program is staffed by one secondary certified teacher and is housed in room 214 of the library. Hours are Tuesday, 1 to 5 p.m. and Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. For more information call 482-6614 ext. 360.

EMU's Jazz Ensemble to Perform Nov. 10

EMU's Jazz Ensemble will perform Thursday, Nov. 10 at 8 p.m. in EMU's Pease Auditorium.

The Jazz Ensemble concert is free and open to the public.

The EMU Jazz Ensemble also will be performing with the Maynard Ferguson Band, Nov. 13 at 7 and 9 p.m. in Tecumseh. For more information on this, or the ensemble's campus concert, call J.R. Smith, director of EMU's Jazz Ensemble at 7-0428.

Fennel To Address Lunch 'n' Lecture

Dr. William Fennel, professor of biology at EMU, will speak on the "Semester at Sea" program at the Lunch 'n' Lecture scheduled for Monday, Nov. 14 at noon in the Commuter Lounge of McKenny Union.

The series is sponsored by the Office of Campus Life and is free and open to the public. For more information, call 7-3045.

Jeanne Ashe To Lecture Here

Jeanne Ashe, television host and author of "On the Daufuskie Islands," will lecture here tonight at 8 p.m. in Room 201 Pray Harrold. Ashe, wife of tennis pro Arthur Ashe, will speak on the apartheid movement in South Africa, as well as on the Daufuskie Island issue.

Ashe's presentation is one of the "Issues and Answers" series sponsored by the Office of Campus Life. The public is invited to attend the free lectures as well as the open reception following each presentation. For more information on the series, call 7-3045.

EMU Women's Association To Hold Raffle

The EMU Women's Association will raffle more than $300 worth of prizes to members and friends of the Association on Nov. 10 at noon in the Susan Burson Room of Roosevelt Hall. Proceeds from the raffle will benefit the Association and its Scholarship Fund for Women.

Raffle tickets are available from members of the Association.

Members of the University community are invited to bring a brown bag lunch and attend the Nov. 10 drawing.

Faculty Luncheon Series Discusses the Nuclear Arms Race

A Faculty Luncheon Series offered during November will look at several aspects of the Nuclear Arms Race.

The topic for Wednesday, Nov. 9 will be "Playing Nuclear Chicken." Daniel Axelrod, associate professor in the Department of Physics at the U of M will speak.

The lecture series meets at noon in the lower level of Holy Trinity Chapel and Student Center, 511 W. Forest.

Brusewitz is Hurons' 'biggest' booster

In early 1982, Jack Brusewitz played basketball for Eastern, now he's the Hurons' "biggest" booster . . . not only is he the Athletic Department's coordinator of promotions but he's six feet eight inches tall.

For the past 14 months, he has worked at developing revenues from EMU's two money-making sports, football and basketball. "Basically, I assist Associate Athletic Director Ron Oestrike in development drives. In '82-'83 we reached our goal of $300,000. But this year the goal is up to $500,000," said Brusewitz.

Since the program has limited funding, Brusewitz emphasized that his job depends on plenty of cooperation in working toward marketing strategies.

"Our main revenue sources are from football and basketball season tickets, individual game tickets, the Huron Club and the Big E Run. The run got us $50,000 last year," said Brusewitz. "Then there are the little things that add up: the percentage of concessions we get, parking monies, and special events like the high school basketball tourney last year when we hosted a big quarter-finals game. And we're looking into renting our facilities for concerts and community activities."

When asked if other EMU sports could become money makers, Brusewitz cited volleyball. "It's an exciting game, and Eastern is a good, competitive team in the MAC."

Brusewitz also spoke about the "Community and Labor Night" and "Donor Night" promotions of the first two football games of the 1983 season.

"They went pretty well. Lately, people at Eastern aren't used to going to football games and aren't aware of their team. If they go, they get to see a good game, even if it's not always a win."

"I've worked with Coach Harkema and I believe the team is eventually going to win," he said. "We want to make people aware before they start to win. And I'm sure not going to say it can't be done."

When asked about the best part of his job, Brusewitz said "The people I work with are great—people like Ron Oestrike and Paul Shouls. I like the community and I like dealing with old acquaintances. We have good cooperation between departments.

What was his most memorable experience as an EMU basketball player? Brusewitz' answer may surprise some.

"It was not when we beat Michigan. We should have beaten them. We were the better team. But, when I was a sophomore, we beat Detroit in the finals of the Motor City Tournament. De LaSalle, my high school, was just a couple miles away. Three guys on that U of D team now play in the NBA. We probably shouldn't have beat them. I'll never forget it."

Campus Commentary

The several national reports concerning the status of education in the United States define an agenda for achieving new standards of excellence. It is appropriate to ask what the prospects for action are.

There are reasons both for optimism and for pessimism.

Hope lies in recognizing that historically the public schools have not failed when purpose and power were joined. The impressive response of the schools during the last two decades to the demands for racial justice, for gender equity, for the integration of the handicapped and for the assimilation of immigrants illustrates the progress which can be made, even though much remains to be done. The results of the national commitment to educational access and equality are undeniable and measurable as minority children register significant gains on national assessment tests and minority youth improve their SAT scores. Most dramatic has been the increase in the proportion of youth graduating from high school, from 30 percent of the black youth in 1950 to 75 percent in 1980, and from 55 percent to 85 percent for white youth during the same period. As the "Nation at Risk" report indicates, "Indeed the proportion of Americans of college age enrolled in higher education is nearly twice that of Japan and far exceeds other nations such as France, West Germany and the Soviet Union. Moreover, when international comparisons were made a decade ago, the top nine percent of American students compared favorably with their peers in other countries."

A school system which can establish this record of accomplishment while serving youth who have been distracted by television, distraught by family instability and disabled by drugs, holds the promise of responding to the challenge to achieve new levels of academic excellence to meet urgent societal requirements.

Or does it?

It is easy to be pessimistic. The heart of the enterprise is the teaching profession and it is in crisis. Teachers are the fruit of a tree which has its roots in the community. The financial and moral nourishment which enables them to prosper is not evident. Consider the following: the average beginning teacher's salary in the United States is $12,769. Current teachers' salaries are 12.2 percent lower than a decade ago, when adjusted for inflation. Many women, who constitute two-thirds of the teaching force, are in the classroom because of limited career options in the past. The altruism which made teaching a "calling," a type of secular ministry, is less present than before (nearly 70 percent of last fall's college freshmen chose "being well off financially" as a "very important" career goal in contrast to 43 percent in 1967.)

The results are predictable. Fewer than 5 percent of full-time college freshmen chose teaching as a probable career in 1982, compared with 19 percent in 1970. The intellectual quality (as measured by SAT's) of those who express interest in teaching is lower than ever before. More than 40 percent of today's teachers wish they had chosen a different career, in contrast to 13 percent in 1971. The supply of new teachers is rapidly dropping. The country needs 78,000 more than will graduate between now and 1987. Special education programs which require teachers with an abundant capacity to value and care for handicapped children and youth are experiencing critical shortages. The shortfall of teachers in mathematics and science is of crisis proportion and is exacerbated by the ease with which college students in these fields are attracted to more financially rewarding careers. (If all of last year's high school seniors who had less than three years of mathematics had taken one additional math course, the nation would have needed 28,500 more math teachers.)

But, new purpose is being formed, and it seems to have a grass roots quality. The call for excellence is not only a response to the demands of the "information age," it is also the product of the progress which has been made toward achieving the democratic ideal of equal opportunity. It is the common desire for an uncommon excellence which can generate the necessary power, both moral and financial, to move the nation to new levels of educational accomplishment.

What, then, is the role of a university, and, more particularly, a college of education, in reinforcing and encouraging this new sense of purpose?

A college of education meets its responsibility when:

1. Standards for admission to and graduation from teacher preparation programs are established which contribute to a teacher's sense of professional pride and accomplishment through assuring quality.
2. Faculty inspire excellence by modeling it in their instruction, conveying it through standards for student performance and honoring it whenever it occurs.
3. Faculty demonstrate excellence in their own scholarly activities and are willing and able to transmit their findings in ways which are helpful to practitioners.
4. Program design acknowledges the centrality of academic content and its mastery while providing the understanding and skills which are essential to effective teaching.
5. Program content reflects the requirements of the technological age along with the knowledge of the arts, social sciences and humanities which is fundamental to a creative, humane and healthy society.
6. Programs are accessible to post-baccalaureate students who make late decisions to enter teaching and who meet the prescribed standards, especially in the areas of math and science.

The Eastern Michigan University College of Education is more selective than ever before and its teacher education students have never been better (for example, this fall the overall G.P.A. for our student teachers averaged 3.06 on a 4.00 scale). However, the College has never had fewer prospective teachers.

Will university commitments to excellence so reduce the supply of needed teachers that lesser standards will be substituted by states as they award "special" or "emergency" certificates in order to staff their classrooms?

The answer to this critical question lies in the breadth and depth of the social commitment to excellence, as measured by society's readiness to sacrifice to attain it. Our College of Education is eager to join in the partnership which is necessary to achieve new standards of academic excellence in our schools. In the final analysis, however, society gets the quantity of quality teachers which it is willing to support.

FIPSE Comprehensive Program

The Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education has set a deadline of Jan. 10, 1984 for applications for the Comprehensive Program. The seven priority areas for 1984 are: learning difficult subjects such as math, science, writing and foreign languages; providing programs to help workers, unemployed individuals and businesses adjust to the changing economy; understanding the educational implications of new technologies such as computers; increasing access to graduate programs; enhancing teacher education; improving institutional leadership and management; and improving course and program completion rates for high school.

The guidelines and application forms will be available shortly. Contact Cheryl Kozell at 7-3090 for further information.

DoD Research Instrumentation Program

The Department of Defense has announced the second phase of a five-year program to upgrade university research instrumentation. The goal of this program is to improve the capability of universities to perform research in support of national defense and the technology goals of DoD.

DoD research interests are in all areas of the physical, engineering, environmental and life sciences and equipment acquisition will be in the $50,000 to $500,000 range.

Proposal submission deadline is Dec. 15. Contact R. Howard at 7-3090 for guidelines.

CORRECTION

The amount of the equity adjustment received by Nancy Gruschow, conference sales manager for Hoyt Conference Center, was $2,000. The incorrect amount was printed in the Nov. 1 issue of Focus EMU.

Focus EMU is published weekly during the fall and winter semesters for faculty and staff at Eastern Michigan University. The deadline for copy is 5 p.m. Tuesdays for the next week's issue.

Participants

Several members of the faculty and staff at EMU have been active in numerous professional activities recently.

Virginia Bottorff, assistant professor in the Department of Home Economics, recently presented the results of a lighting evaluation study at the National Conference of the Illuminating Engineering Society in Los Angeles, Calif.

Bottorff evaluated two lighting systems designed by Smith, Hinchman & Grylls - a Detroit architectural firm. The evaluation focused on the environmental characteristics of the two lighting systems and their effect on the workers in SH & G's headquarters building.

Dr. Harold PaDelford, associate professor in the Department of Business and Industrial Education, recently published an article in the Journal of Industrial Teacher Education titled, "A Conceptual Model of the Psychomotor Domain."

The article describes a classification system which can be used by educators and psychologists in identifying the factors involved in neuromuscular acts. The model also could assist in defining the requirements for skill acquisition and development.

Dr. Marshall McLennan, professor in the Department of Geography and Geology, was appointed to a three-year term on the State Historic Preservation Review Board. The board reviews all Michigan nominations to the National Register of Historic Places and serves as an advisory body for the State Historic Preservation Office.

Dr. Calvin Michael, professor in the Department of Teacher Education, recently presented a paper titled "Constitutional Issues in Tuition Tax Credits" to the Michigan Civil Rights Commission and the state's advisory board of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights at a Lansing conference.

Dr. Matthew H. Sauber, assistant professor in the Marketing Department, recently presented an award-winning paper titled "A Mood Scale for Survey Research" at the 1983 American Marketing Association Educators' Conference in Dearborn. The paper was cited as the best competitive entry in the research methodology track among 222 submissions.

Dr. Mary Teal, professor in the Music Department, will be included in the seventh edition of "The World Who's Who of Women." Teal also is included in the 1978 edition of "The World Who's Who of Women in Education."

Dr. Daryl M. Hafter and Dr. Mary M. Robischon, of the Department of History and Philosophy, recently presented papers at a conference on the History of Women in Science, Technology and Medicine in Budapest, Hungary. Hafter's papers were titled "Guild and Non-Guild Workers in the Early Industrial Revolution" and "The Spinners of Rouen Confront English Technology." Robischon's paper was titled "Women, Widows and the Scientific Instrument Makers of London."

Michael Paciorek, assistant professor in HPERD, recently presented a paper on the ways parents of handicapped children can participate in motor development programs, at the Fourth International Symposium of Adapted Physical Activity in London, England.

Dr. Jie-hwa Lo Upshur, associate professor in the Department of History, wrote two book reviews which appear in the summer 1983 issue of the Journal of Asian Studies. She reviewed Fox Butterfield's "China Alive in the Bitter Sea" and Richard Bernstein's "From the Center of the Earth: the Search for Truth About China."

Dr. Marvin Pasch, head of the Department of Teacher Education, recently coauthored and published "The Model Me." This high school student test on human behavior also has an accompanying teacher's manual.

Dr. Fred M. Anderson, professor in the Department of History and Philosophy, served as a discussion panelist at an education conference at Sonoma State University recently.

Phyllis Young, instructor in the Department of Home Economics, recently presented "The Impact of Employed Women on Their Families" to the American Home Economics Association Convention in Milwaukee, Wis.

Dr. Delma Banuelos, director of the Bilingual Teacher Education Program, recently received an Educational Policy Fellowship from the Institute for Educational Leadership in Washington, D.C. Banuelos is the first EMU recipient of the award.

Dr. Monroe Friedman, professor in the Department of Psychology, was recently appointed to the editorial board of the Journal of Consumer Research by the journal's co-editors. This is the second time Friedman has served on the journal's editorial board. He also served on the editorial board of the international Journal of Consumer Policy and as editor of the Journal of Consumer Affairs.

Dr. Donna M. Schmitt, associate professor in the Department of Leadership and Counseling, gave the commencement address at the Adrian Adult Education High School graduation this summer.

Marvin Sims, instructor of communication and theatre arts, chaired a workshop titled "A Psychodramatic Approach to a Black Actor's Training: An Experimental Demonstration" at the American Theatre Association's National Convention in Minneapolis earlier this year. The workshop presented an exploration of the classical psychodrama concepts and included the techniques of J.L. Moreno, Viola Spolin and Brian Way.

Also, Sims was elected as the Black Theatre Program Planning Committee Chairperson for the 1985 ATA Convention to be held in Toronto, Canada. Sims will be attending a planning session slated for early February in San Francisco.

Dr. Jack D. Minzey, head of the Department of Leadership and Counseling, recently served as recorder and panelist at the International Community Education Conference in Dublin, Ireland. He also introduced two of the keynote speakers at the week long conference.

Virginia Koste, professor and director of EMU's Drama

Theatre for the Young program, recently published an article titled "T.I.E. Game, Team Play: Theatre of Conflict" in the Children's Theatre Review.

Dr. H. James Rokusek, professor and head of the Department of Business and Industrial Education, was elected president of the Michigan Occupational Teacher Education Association for 1983-84.

Betty Barber, assistant professor in the Department of Home Economics, recently presented a paper titled "Delayed Motherhood and Career Success" at the American Home Economics Association Convention in Milwaukee, Wis.

Dr. Brigitte D. Muller, professor in the Department of Foreign Languages and Bilingual Studies, recently received an American Francophone Association Stipend at the association's sixth conference. The five day conference took place in Quebec, Canada.

Dr. Bruce L. Warren, associate director of the Institute for the Study of Children and Families, recently presented a workshop titled "New Models for Parent Education: Contemporary Parenting Program and the Footsteps Film Series." The conference titled "Touching Children . . . Reaching Families . . . Building Programs" took place in Wayne.

Benjamin T. Hourani, professor in the Department of Political Science, recently spoke on "Teilhard's Ecumene and the Politics of Peace" as part of a Visionaries of World Peace Colloquium sponsored by the United Nations University for Peace. The session took place on the "International Day of Peace."

Registration, Winter Semester

Registration for Winter semester will begin on Wednesday, Nov. 16. Class schedule books can be obtained at Briggs Hall. Evening students may obtain a copy from Academic Services, 229 Pierce Hall. All faculty and academic departments should encourage students to seek academic advising as early as possible to avoid the last minute rush. Also, students are reminded to bring their catalog and academic advising folder with them to their advising appointment.

Residence Requirements

Transfer students should be aware of the residence requirements for the bachelor's degree. All students are required to earn at least 30 credit hours at EMU to qualify for graduation. A total of 10 credit hours of the last 30 hours earned prior to the granting of the degree must be taken from EMU. Community college transfers must earn a minimum of 60 credit hours, exclusive of physical education credits, at a four year institution. No students should take courses from a community or junior college for transfer to EMU once 75 credit hours have been earned.

GPA Requirements for Graduation

At least a 2.0 GPA is required

in all of the following:

1. Combined grades of all transfer and EMU credit hours earned

Swihart honored at conference

William Swihart, director of Purchasing at EMU, recently was honored by the National Association of Educational Buyers and the Michigan Association of College and University Purchasing Agents at a two-day conference at Concordia College.

At the conference, Swihart was honored for his many achievements and contributions to colleges on a local, state and national level.

Swihart joined the Eastern staff in 1964 to form a purchasing department, in accordance with the new constitution making each state college and university autonomous. He also was responsible for the certification of minority vendors.

21st Annual EMU Football Bust Scheduled for Nov. 21

The 21st Annual Eastern Michigan University Football Bust will be held Monday, Nov. 21, 1983 at the Hoyt Conference Center on the EMU campus.

The awards dinner, honoring the 1983 EMU football squad, will begin at 5:30 p.m. with cocktails and dinner at 7 p.m.

Tickets for this year's football bust must be purchased in advance. The cost is $17 per person and tickets are available at the EMU Athletic Office or from Football Bust Chairman Ralph Pasola at 2714 Elmwood, Ann Arbor.

In addition to honoring the 1983 Football Hurons, the Football Bust Committee also will present awards to four outstanding high school coaches in the state of Michigan who are EMU graduates.

Huron Cagers Catch the Eye of "The Hoop Scoop"

When Eastern's men's basketball coach Jim Boyce evaluates his 1983-84 Huron men's basketball team, he sees a team with a lot of ability that could be a factor in the Mid-American Conference basketball championship race.

That assessment apparently is shared by the editors of a basketball publication called The Hoop Scoop. The Oct. '83 issue of "The Hoop Scoop" sees the Hurons as the No. 1 team in the Mid-American Conference in terms of talent.

The magazine gives the Hurons a talent rating of 28.4 to tie Purdue for 24th in the nation in the Division I ranks. Toledo warrants the second-best talent rating, according to The Hoop Scoop, with a 27.3 rating followed by Ohio at 27.1, Bowling Green 23.2, Northern Illinois 23.0, Miami 20.5, Ball State 17.9, Western Michigan 17.4, Central Michigan 16.3 and Kent State 15.2.

Coach Boyce's Hurons opened their season Nov. 3 with a win/loss to a touring Athletes in Action team in a game played in Bowen Field House. The Hurons are slated to open the season officially on Nov. 26 at Cleveland State with the first home encounter set for Tuesday, Nov. 29 when the Hurons host Marshall University at 7:30 p.m. in Bowen Field House.
