Domino's president Monaghan to give commencement address

Thomas S. Monaghan, chairman of the board and president of Domino's Pizza and owner of the Detroit Tigers, will deliver the commencement address at winter commencement ceremonies and receive an honorary Doctor of Business degree Sunday, Dec. 16, in Bowen Field House.

In addition to Monaghan, A. Alfred Taubman, chairman and chief executive officer of The Taubman Co. and principal owner of the Michigan Panthers football team, and Theodore G.

Tangalakis, area business leader and member of numerous professional, civic and university associations, also will receive honorary Doctor of Business degrees. The EMU Board of Regents approved the degree recipients at its October meeting.

Monaghan was born in Ann Arbor and raised in an orphanage and foster homes. He attended Ferris State College before joining the Marine Corps in 1956. He received his honorable discharge in 1959 and enrolled at the University of Michigan, working three jobs to support himself.

Monaghan entered the pizza business in 1960, when he and his brother, James, borrowed $500 and opened a small store on West Cross Street in Ypsilanti. By 1973, Monaghan had 60 stores in operation. Today, Domino's is the largest pizza delivery firm in the country with more than 1,000 stores in its chain.

Monaghan is deeply involved in the civic, professional and educational life of southeastern Michigan, serving on the board of directors of Cleary College in Ypsilanti and WTVS-Channel 56 in Detroit. He also is a member of the Chambers of Commerce in Detroit, Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

Taubman, a native of the metropolitan Detroit area, was trained in architecture and educated at the University of Michigan and Lawrence Institute of Technology. The Taubman Company, one of the nation's leading retail development firms, manages 20 shopping malls across America, including Briarwood in Ann Arbor.

In addition to his business affairs, which include being principal owner and chairman of the Michigan Panthers, Taubman is chairman and chief executive officer of A & W Restaurants, director of Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit and director of United Brands Company. In 1983, he was honored by the United Foundation of Detroit and the Southeast Michigan Chapter of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, as well as being named Michiganian of the Year by the Detroit News.

Tangalakis earned his bachelor's degree from Alma College in 1938 and his master's of science degree from the Pharmacy College of Grand Rapids in 1942.

A medical corpsman during World War II, Tangalakis served with distinction and was decorated for rescuing men from a burning tent. He served in the Ardennes, Rhineland and Central European campaigns and, in 1945, was the first medic to enter Belsen Concentration camp.

On his return from the army in 1946, Tangalakis opened Campus Drugs on Cross Street in Ypsilanti. The store serves the EMU community, and Tangalakis soon adopted the school as his own. In the ensuing years he became widely recognized throughout the University community for his tireless efforts on behalf of EMU.

Tangalakis, who now owns several businesses on Cross Street, has been actively involved in Ypsilanti civic and business affairs and is the recipient of the Ypsilanti Police Officers Association Award of Merit.

Regents Summary

The Board of Regents acted on the following agenda items at its October meeting:

— Changed the name of the old Frederick Alexander Music Building to the Business and Finance Offices Building. The new name provides an interim identification of the building in order to eliminate confusion. A permanent name will be recommended when the permanent use of the building has been determined.

— Gave initial approval to revisions to the 1984-85 Operating Budget, totaling $1,139,338.

— Reclassified the jobs of four executive directors and the assistant to the president for community and governmental relations, and approved salary increases for most of them.

Regents outline institutional priorities

A report listing 49 institutional priorities to be considered in planning the 1985-86 General Fund Operating Budget was discussed by the Board of Regents at its October meeting.

The itemized priorities were submitted to the board as part of the first quarter planning cycle. Once adopted as priorities they will be incorporated into the budget development documentation and into formal program plans.

During the second quarter of the planning cycle, the 1985-86 budget request will be derived from the identified institutional priorities list. The 1985-86 budget request is expected to emphasize University Computing, the Master of Science degree program in Computer Science, services centers in the Colleges of Business, Education and Health and Human Services, library resources management, instructional equipment, the College of Technology and the language and International Trade Program.

Under the University's goal to intensify the admissions effort to enroll students proportionate with the institutional capacity and provide a comprehensive, stabilizing, financial aid program, the priorities include efforts in undergraduate and graduate admissions, scholarship programs and registration and records.

In keeping with the University's goal to give highest priority to the maintenance and development of superior academic programs, priorities are listed in the areas of the Honors Program, faculty allocations, program review, spring/summer session enrollments, faculty development and retention, program growth, instructional equipment, a central microcomputer laboratory, library resources, educational technology, the College of

EMU Presents Art Work of Judy Loeb

EMU will host "The Months of Mesas and Mountains," a series of paintings by professor Judy Loeb, in Ford Gallery, Oct. 29 to Nov. 21. This is the 17th solo exhibition of Loeb's paintings. She is represented by the Terrero Gallery in Santa Fe, the BFM Gallery in New York City and by Nestor and Associates in Brighton. The exhibition will include 12 paintings, each representing a different month of the year. The paintings are on large Japanese handmade paper, and depict the changing mood of the landscape. For more information on the exhibit, contact the EMU Art Department at (313) 487-0465.

Griffiths, Ford, Crockett Scheduled for Lecture Series

Congressman George Crockett of Detroit will speak on how minorities will be affected by the upcoming elections at noon Wednesday, Oct. 31, in the Commuter Lounge of McKenny Union.

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, is the final in a series titled "Election '84: The Decision Making Process," sponsored by the Office of Campus Life. For more information on the lecture series, contact the Office of Campus Life at 7-3045.

Ogden Organizing a Weekend Of Theater in Chicago

Russel Ogden, professor of Business Education, is planning a weekend of theater and dining in Chicago, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 1 and 2. The weekend will include "The King and I," starring Yul Brynner at the Aeri Crown Theatre, and Carol Channing, Leslie Uggams and Andrea McCardle in "Jerry's Girls" at the Shubert Theatre. A bus will leave from the McKenny Union Parking lot at 7 a.m. Saturday, with dinner and "Jerry's Girls" the same evening. After "The King and I" Sunday afternoon, the group will return to Ypsilanti at midnight. The cost of $149 includes both shows, accommodations at the Palmer House Hotel, dinner and a box lunch Saturday, as well as bus fare. For more details, call Ogden at 482-0293.

Career Services to Take Bus to MTC Job Fair

The Career Services Center will provide free transportation and pay the $2 registration fee for any EMU student interested in the Michigan Technology Council Annual Job Fair, slated for Saturday, Nov. 3 at the University of Michigan's North Campus Commons. Faculty and staff are urged to announce the availability of this program to students. The bus will leave at 10 a.m. Saturday from the front of Goodison Hall, and will return at noon. Additional trips will be made on the hour if needed. For more information, call the Career Services Center at 7-0400.

Lansing studies women in politics

Win or lose, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's place on the Democratic presidential ticket has already made a powerful impact on the shape and future of American politics.

According to Dr. Marjorie Lansing, professor of political science, Ferraro's nomination has broken a long-standing barrier in a significant way. "The major political parties are going to be hard pressed from now on not to put a woman on the ticket," she said. "That is, unless she (Ferraro) completely bombs out and the election, if lost, is blamed on her. But, so far she's made a successful run. She's added to the ticket."

Lansing eyes every state and federal election with particular interest. She has spent much time and energy studying the roles of women in politics, focusing primarily on the voting behavior and voting patterns of women. As author of the books Women and Politics: the Invisible Majority and Women and Politics: The Visible Majority she is a nationally-recognized expert on the women's vote. She has appeared extensively on locally-generated radio and television programs including WJR's "Focus," Dennis Wholey's "Late Night America" and CBET-TV's "Around Town." In addition to lecturing extensively throughout the United States, she also has provided interviews and commentary for local and major Detroit newspapers and has been featured in such publications as the Chicago Sun-Times, Newsweek magazine, The New York Times and The Washington Post.

Lansing's interest and involvement in politics began in her home state during her undergraduate years at Florida University in Tallahassee. While majoring in political science, she took an active role in state politics, helping to elect candidates to the state legislature. She also participated in a political lecture tour of Europe with a student group raising money for loyalist Spain.

After earning her bachelor's degree, Lansing attended Columbia University. "I earned my master's degree in one year because that's all the money I had," she recalled. "I wrote the first draft of my master's essay because I couldn't afford to have it typed."

During the World War II years, Lansing worked as a research investigator for a subcommittee of a judiciary committee for the U.S. Senate. After three years there, she married the late John Lansing, and the two went to Harvard where John finished his doctoral degree in economics and she volunteered in Cambridge politics.

In 1950, Lansing's husband was asked to help institute the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research and serve on the University's economics faculty, so the Lansings moved to Ann Arbor.

During the 1950s, Lansing moonlighted in politics while raising her three children. "I held all the jobs in the Democratic party," she said. "You name it and I did it. From Washtenaw County chairman, public relations and money raising. . . I did A to Z jobs as a political volunteer/activist for the Democratic party."

She also served as an elected delegate to the 1960 and 1976 Democratic conventions. "I was one of the unpaid volunteer corps. . . typical in traditional women's politics," she said.

In 1961, when her children were in high school, Lansing returned to school at the University of Michigan where she earned her doctorate in political science. "I was one of the early 'retreads,' before most women returned to school, and I took a lot of flack about it," she said. "People used to ask me 'Are you going to study baton-twirling also? Why are you doing this? Your husband has a good job.'"

Lansing's interest in female voting patterns surfaced when she chose "the political participation of women" as a dissertation topic. That too, was criticized at the time. "It was not regarded as researchable because it was generally assumed that women and men didn't differ politically." But Lansing persisted and found things differently.

In 1966, Lansing began working part-time at EMU and more than 10 years ago, taught the University's first class in women's studies. The lack of available literature on women in politics prompted her to further research the women's vote—a move that proved to be fortuitous. "I caught the wave of the burgeoning interest in the women's movement. It was a lucky move for me," she said.

In the books that ensued, Lansing developed the concept of the gender gap and extensively analyzed the voting behavior of women. Her research has given her powerful insights into the role women can, and do, play in the electoral process and she's particularly interested in the upcoming election.

"If it's in any way a close election, women could make the difference in the outcome because more women than men will vote," Lansing said. "Six million more women than men voted in 1980 and it's projected that eight or 10 million more women than men will vote this time around."

Marjorie Lansing, Ted Mondale

Issue-wise, Lansing also sees some sharp divisions in male-female sensitivities including the war-peace issue and economic fairness. Just how these issues will impact the upcoming election is hard to decipher, but, according to Lansing, "the gap is still there."

Lansing believes Ferraro is a woman candidate versus a woman's candidate. "She was added to the ticket to bring enough votes to win the election. And, she's appealed to men as well as to women," she said.

As early as February 1984, Lansing had predicted Ferraro's nomination as the Democratic vice presidential candidate. "She was an ideal candidate from many perspectives. . . she was an acceptable member of the 'male club' and combined that with being a strong feminist, among other things," she said.

Lansing also said, if it had been possible, a Republican female running mate would not have made the same political 'ripple' as Ferraro has. "Ferraro's at the head of the women's movement. She supports all of the great changes in the lifestyles of women. She represents a new era for the new woman," she said. "The candidate Reagan would have chosen would have been a showcase woman, because the Republican party and its platform don't stand for anything that would benefit women," she added.

None the less, the majority of women voted for Reagan in 1980 and many women will support him next week. That has Lansing stumped. "It's baffling in this election because the majority of the public does not agree with Reagan on many crucial issues, such as arms control, protection of the environment, high defense budget, cutting social services, cutting social security, etc., yet they have been showing up as supporting him because of his leadership. This is an anomaly in politics that people are supporting a candidate that they don't agree with," she said.

Lansing refuses to speculate on the outcome of the presidential election saying she "doesn't read tea leaves," and she hopes that the national issues don't overshadow some important state issues, like the defeat of Proposal C. "The number one problem for universities and colleges in Michigan is underfunding. They've been underfunded for 10 years and that has to turn around. The defeat of Proposal C is absolutely essential or tuitions will have to be increased. . . that's the number one problem. . . the keystone of the arch," she said.

"The economic future of Michigan is closely linked to the teaching and research in the laboratories and classrooms of our universities. We face an electronic computer age in which we have to develop new skills, new products, new approaches, and that basically comes out of a university," she added.

To Lansing, next week's election will not only have significant implications nationwide, but personal ones as well. As a candidate for U-M's Board of Regents, she's hoping to secure a post where she will be able to impact higher education and Michigan directly.

Win or lose, Lansing's impact in American and Michigan politics, will, and already has, been felt.

Research

Economic Development Research and Evaluation

The Economic Development Administration will accept proposals for research and evaluation projects until February 28, 1985. Projects should: (1) assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment and chronic depression in various areas and regions of the Nation; (2) assist in the formulation and implementation of national, state and local programs which will raise income levels and otherwise produce solutions to the problems resulting from the above conditions; and (3) evaluate the effectiveness of approaches and techniques employed to alleviate economic distress.

Priority consideration will be given to proposals which address one or more of the following areas of interest: regional growth, unemployment, underemployment (income levels), rural economic development, industrial location, private sector participation in economic development issues, state and local government economic development issues, migration, export development, minority economic and business development, and the role of productivity and technology in economic development.

For further information on this program, contact R. Howard at 7-3090.

Energy Fellowship Opportunities

Various Department of Energy laboratories and facilities will provide opportunities for full-time faculty members and college students to participate in research programs relating to energy production, utilization, conservation, and their societal implications. Appointments at DOE facilities are made to individuals in the life, physical and social sciences, mathematics and engineering.

Application materials may be obtained from University Program Division, Oak Ridge Associated Universities, P.O. Box 117, Oak Ridge, TN 37830.

Promotions

New Faces

The following promotions were approved by the Board of Regents at its October meeting.

James E. Olsen, admissions officer at Eastern Michigan University, was promoted to acting associate director in the Admissions Office. Olsen earned his bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University and master's degree from the University of Michigan. During the 1960s, Olsen worked as an English teacher and coach at Clare High School. He also was director of guidance and counselor at Cherry Hill High School. In 1967, Olsen started working at EMU as assistant professor of education and counselor at Roosevelt Laboratory School.

Barbara Durant, acting research analyst in Eastern Michigan University's Office of Planning, Budgeting and Analysis, was promoted to coordinator of Cooperative Education in the Career Services Center. An Ypsilanti resident, Durant replaces Angie Laycock who was promoted to Interim Director of Cooperative Education. Durant has worked for the University for the past three years and received her bachelor's and master's degrees from EMU in 1963 and 1983 respectively. She also worked as a teacher in the Whitmore Lake Public School System.

Dr. Robert DelCampo, associate professor in the Department of Human, Environmental and Consumer Resources (formerly the Department of Home Economics) was appointed acting director of that same department. DelCampo received his bachelor's degree from the State University of New York, his master's degree from the Virginia Polytechnic

James Olsen

Institute and State University and his doctorate from Florida State University. Prior to his EMU appointment as assistant professor of family and child development in 1975, DelCampo worked as an instructor and graduate teaching assistant in the Department of Home and Family Life at Florida State University. He received honors at EMU for being one of the first faculty to publish scholarly articles after the formation of the Colleges of Human Services in 1976.

Constance Barnes, computer operator in University Computing, was promoted to senior computer operator in that same department. A native of Ypsilanti, Barnes earned her bachelor's degree from Liberty Baptist University in Lynchburg, Va., in 1979. She also worked as a keypunch data entry operator for a North Carolina firm.

All appointments are effective immediately.

The following appointments were made by the Board of Regents at its October meeting:

Mary Kay Hopkins, clinical associate in Case Western Reserve University's School of Nursing, was appointed part-time nurse-practitioner in Snow Health Center. She earned her bachelor's degree in nursing in 1970 from St. Joseph College in Emmitsburg, Md. She earned certification as an obstetrics/gynecology nurse-practitioner from Emory University in 1975 and received a nurse-midwifery certificate in 1976 from Medical University of South Carolina.

She has worked as a nurse at Providence Hospital in Washington, D.C., West Point Army Hospital at West Point, N.Y., and Martin Army Hospital in Fort Benning, Ga.

Mary A. Long, registered nurse in the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration medical Center, was appointed part-time staff nurse at Snow Health Center. An Indianapolis, Ind. native, Long earned her bachelor's degree in nursing from Wayne State University in 1983. She is a member of Sigma Theta Tau, and has worked at the VA hospital for the past five years.

Two faculty members were added to the Department of Nursing Education. They were assistant professors Dr. Marlene Z. Cohen and Suzanne Ivey.

Cohen received her bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Michigan. Prior to her appointment she worked as a teaching assistant and research assistant at the University of Michigan.

Ivey received her bachelor's degree from Case Western Reserve University and her master's degree from Northern

Mary A. Long

Illinois University. She has worked as a school nurse, an assistant professor at William Raney Harper College in Palatine, Ill., and as patient care coordinator at Hospice of Washtenaw.

Dr. Gary Hammerberg was appointed assistant professor of medical technology in the Department of Associated Health Professions. Hammerberg received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Michigan State University and his doctorate from Western Michigan University. He worked as an instructor at Michigan State University and Kalamazoo Valley Community College and as a supervisor at West Shore Hospital in Manistee. Prior to his appointment, Hammerberg worked at Bronson Methodist Hospital in Kalamazoo.

Carmen M. King was appointed assistant professor in the Department of Art. King earned her bachelor's degree from St. Louis University and master's degrees from both St. Louis University and the University of Missouri-Columbia. Prior to her increase in base salary of $3,350 from $52,650 to $56,000. Dr. Dorian Sprandel, executive director of auxiliary service, received an increase of $4,784 from $50,716 to $55,500. James P. Greene, executive director of human resources, received an increase of $5,738 from $48,762 to $54,500 and George Johnston, executive director of university planning, received an increase of $1,850 from $52,650 to $54,500.

The salary increases accompanied the reclassification of the executive director position from AP-13 to AP-14. The assistant to the president for government and community relations position was upgraded from AP-14 to AP-15.

The position of executive director of University Computing, now filled by E. Leon Daniels, also was reclassified at the AP-14 level however, no salary adjustment was recommended at this time, largely because of Daniels' short period of tenure in the position. He joined the University May 1, 1984.

All the approved increases are retroactive to June 28, 1984 and do not include the six percent adjustment approved for all non-bargained-for staff effective July 8, 1984.

— Accepted $92,259 in gifts to the University for the third quarter. Gift totals included $29,724 for the College of Arts and Sciences, $3,193 for the College of Business, $1,654 for the College of Education, $1,182 for the College of Health and Human Services, $695 for the College of Technology, $12,433 for the Development Fund, $11,983 for Intercollegiate Athletics, $10,962 for scholarships, $5,425 for plant funds, $7,759 for other funds, including WEMU, $1,328 for student loans and $5,921 in gifts-in-kind.

— Accepted 11 educational grants totaling $370,843.

The largest of the grants was a $137,878 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to the Institute for the Study of Children and Families for the project "Intergenerational Linkages: The Teaching Learning Communities Model."

This program will establish 26 new intergenerational programs in the metropolitan areas of Detroit-Ann Arbor, Chicago and Atlanta. The program will employ more than 300 volunteer "grandpersons" to share skills with children and youth through arts and humanities projects.

Thus far this year, the EMU Regents have accepted 41 educational grants totaling $1,192,327.

Regents outline variety of institutional priorities

Technology, international studies and academic reorganization.

Meeting the University's goal to be responsive to the changing needs and desires of all enrolled student groups in the interest of assuming a quality student life that enhances retention efforts, priorities include planned efforts in the areas of student retention, academic advising, career placement, student employment, campus life, Intercollegiate Athletics, cooperative education and child care.

In response to the University's goal to maintain superior academic facilities, improve safety and streamline procedures and organizations to achieve maximum physical plant efficiency and economy, priorities were identified in the areas of the campus plan, a student services facility, facility maintenance, handicapped accessibility, campus safety, McKenny Union, the College of Business, Welch Hall and Cross Street.

Addressing the University's goal to create a responsive environment for all employees, automate business, fiscal and budget operation and provide competitive benefits to help reduce staff turnover, improve staff morale and ultimately improve productivity, the priorities included efforts in the areas of University Computing, University planning, office automation, faculty/staff compensation, affirmative action, staff training and development, policies and practices, employee assistance programs and financial accounting.

And, to meet the University's goal to increase external support for the institution from private donors, the state and federal governments and private foundations, priorities were cited in the areas of the University image, public service, the Corporate Training Center, state, federal and community relations, alumni and friend development.
