

EMU, Romulus agree on marketing study for proposed University Park

EMU and the city of Romulus have reached agreement on a contract which will provide for a marketing study of the demand for educational services by adult learners in the metropolitan Detroit area, Roy Wilbanks, assistant to the president for government and community relations, announced Feb. 4.

The contract is the result of negotiations between the University and Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally in an effort to involve EMU in providing educational services through a future Romulus Center in a proposed University Park.

The proposed University park is a 300-acre site north of I-94 and west of Merriman Road, adjacent to several existing hotels, presently under development as a management and conference center designed to serve the region's business and industrial community. A central part of the concept is a facility which would provide educational services to individual and corporate clients.

"The city of Romulus approached Eastern Michigan University," Wilbanks explained,

"concerning its interest in providing these educational services. We agreed the concept was attractive and had merit. We're now at the point of undertaking a study to determine the demand for educational services at this particular site."

The marketing study will be conducted by the Office of Adult Learning Services of The College Board, located in New York City. The study will include five components: a demographic analysis of the area within a 60-mile radius of the proposed center, a survey of area adult learners and local and national companies to determine the precise nature of their demands for educational services, an analysis of educational services presently available in the area, along with the degree to which they are used, and an evaluation of EMU's readiness to participate in meeting the assessed demand.

The study is expected to begin by the end of February and be completed during the spring. The cost of the study is $70,000, of which $25,000 will be paid by the University, $25,000 will come from city of Romulus resources, $15,000 from EDC Corporation and the remaining $5,000 from a yet to be determined source by the University.

"I see this as a project which could complement the proposed EMU Corporate Training Center in Ypsilanti Township," Wilbanks said. "The programs we see as having the most potential for the Romulus Center are language and international trade, travel and tourism and selected general business programs.

"This is another example of Eastern Michigan University working in cooperation with a municipality to further economic development. In this instance, an innovative proposal was developed by Major McAnally which is compatible with our educational mission. We look forward to learning the results of the survey this spring and to furthering our relationship with the city of Romulus."

The contract for the study will be formally recommended for approval to the EMU Board of Regents at its next regular meeting Feb. 27.

Promoted workers are honored guests at Beaux Arts Ball

This year's Beaux Arts Ball, EMU Theater's second celebration of the arts, will have a new twist added to it.

All University employees who were promoted, reclassified or had their positions upgraded during 1984 are invited to attend the gala affair as guests of Human Resources. The 1920s-in-Paris style evening, scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 16 at 9 p.m. in Hoyt Conference Center, will include dancing to live big band music and a live show by the popular comedy team of Harper and Gannon from WNIC Radio.

The honored guests (96 total) have been notified by mail and will receive complimentary tickets to the ball, which cost $25 per person. A $15 portion of the ticket price is tax deductible and benefits the Department of Communication and Theatre Arts Development Fund.

"We feel that being promoted, upgraded or reclassified is a significant achievement," said Ken Handwerker, director of the Staff Training and Development. "We look at this as a celebration of success—a way of thanking them for their outstanding service."

Seminar discusses nutrition needs for women

"Nutrition Concerns of Women," a one-day seminar, will be held Friday, Feb. 15 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Hoyt Conference Center.

The seminar is being sponsored by the department of Human, Environmental and Consumer Resources, the Dairy Council of Michigan and the Michigan Beef Commission. The program will be of special interest to dietitians, nutritionists, dental health practitioners, physicians and related health professionals, as well as students in fields related to nutrition.

The one-day seminar will provide current information on key nutrition topics of concern to women through presentations of clinical research, interactive exhibits and informal discussion. "Calcium Needs of Women" will be presented by Dr. Linsey Helen Allen, associate professor of nutritional sciences from the University of Connecticut. Allen received her Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Nottingham, England and her doctorate from the University of California.

Allen has been a faculty member at San Francisco State

Library Book Sale

The EMU Library will sell some of its duplicate gift books in the Library Lobby today from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Students and staff will find a wide variety of good, used titles which have come to the Library as gifts and which are duplicates of materials in the collection or which are not appropriate to the Library. The books are on a wide variety of subjects—literature, including some fiction; history; education; social sciences and many more. Proceeds from the sale will be used to acquire needed library materials.

Music department brings 'refreshing' festival to EMU

If history repeats itself, there will be an afterglow of inspiration buzzing about the music department in the weeks following Feb. 21.

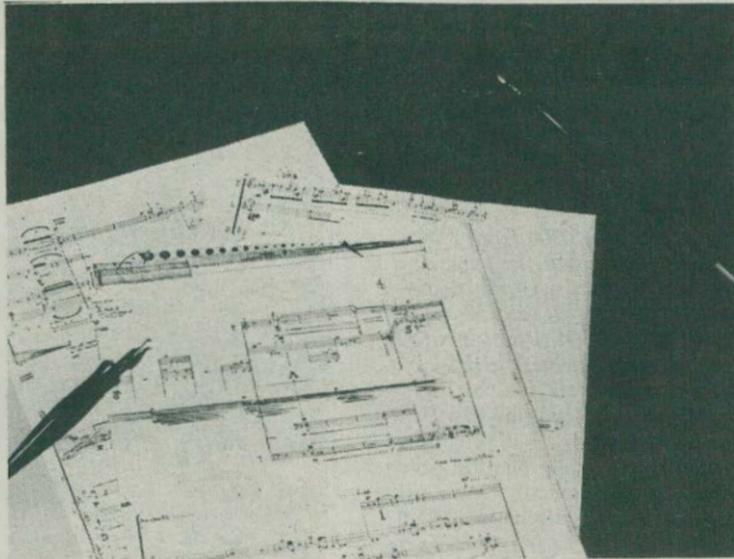

"This is like our spring tonic—a chance to get together and share our perceptions of contemporary music by focusing on the work of one composer," said Dr. James Hause about the music department's fourth biennial Contemporary Music Festival, which starts Feb. 19 and lasts for three days.

This year's featured composer is Daniel Pinkham, a distinguished American composer who has earned a reputation as an organist and authority on performance practice of early music. Pinkham's catalog includes two symphonies and other works for large ensembles; cantatas and oratorios; concertos, theater works, chamber music and electronic music; as well as 20 television documentary film scores.

The Massachusetts native, who studied under famed composers like Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Samuel Barber, teaches at the New England Conservatory of Music and holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from Harvard University. He will highlight a composer's forum on Tuesday, Feb. 19. During the next two days, there will be open rehearsals featuring his work, a faculty recital and a Contemporary Music Festival concert.

"By holding the open rehearsals with the composer, we can see a work of art being brought to life as the artist intended it," Hause said. "The experience motivates everybody in the department—it has an afterglow that lasts for weeks."

The composer's forum, which will be directed by EMU's Anthony Iannaccone, will serve as a "feast of talented people sharing problems and insights," Hause said. "Students benefit because they hear an outside authority reinforcing things we've been telling them for two years," Hause added with a laugh. "The whole festival is refreshing—and rather refreshing."

On Wednesday, there will be open rehearsals with EMU's Concert Winds, Madrigal Singers, University Choir and the University Orchestra. A faculty recital will follow that evening.

Thursday's agenda includes an early music colloquium and more open rehearsals, followed by the Festival Concert at 8 p.m. in Pease Auditorium.

Although the Festival is free and open to the public, Hause points out that it probably won't have mass appeal.

"I won't attract the man off the street," Hause said. "Pinkham composes in a lot of areas, but he specializes in voice. He will attract people involved in serious art forms—and he should share valuable insight."

Here are the events for the Contemporary Music Festival. All will be held in Pease Auditorium unless otherwise noted. The events are free and open to the public.

—Wednesday, Feb. 20

—Opening Address: Daniel Pinkham, 10:45 a.m.

—Open Rehearsals: Concert Winds, 1 p.m.; Madrigal Singers, 1:30 p.m.; University Choir, 3 p.m. and University Orchestra, 4 p.m.

Focus on Staff

Diverse responsibilities suit Connell just fine

The job of associate provost at EMU is no easy task, but Dr. Joan Connell feels right at home in the position.

As associate provost for budget, personnel and operation, Connell's responsibilities are numerous. She assists the provost and vice president for academic affairs in planning, developing and administering the Academic Affairs Division, and directs the development of the division's budget, which is roughly $40 million.

Connell also helps EMU departments and colleges with all personnel actions—"hiring, firing and continuing"—and works as a mediator between those units. "I provide resources, solve communication problems between areas, intercede for them when problems arise or call them to task when they don't obey the rules," Connell explained.

In short, her job is to help the administrative portion of EMU run smoothly, and Connell's background is as impressive and diverse as her responsibilities.

Connell holds a bachelor's degree in English from Seton Hill College in Greensburg, Pa., and master's degrees in library science and European history from Duquesne University and the University of Arizona-Tucson, respectively. She also has a master's degree in library science and a doctorate in British history from the University of Chicago.

During her career as an educator, Connell served as library director and assistant professor at Seton Hill College from 1969 to 1970. She joined the faculty of Chicago State University in 1970 and became a full professor and head of the Department of History in 1976.

In 1978, Connell began her career as an administrator when she was named CSU's assistant to the vice president for academic affairs. She was promoted to assistant vice president for academic personnel and contract administration one year later.

Connell left CSU in 1981 to become vice president for academic affairs at Ohio Dominican College in Columbus and in August 1984, was appointed associate provost at EMU.

Since her arrival at Eastern,

Connell has taken a good look at the University and is impressed with both the student body and the faculty. "At Eastern, the students seem to be extremely articulate, literate and hard-working," she said, "They are an impressive group of people."

Connell also praised the faculty, saying, "There is a tremendous amount of scholarly work being done and there seems to be attention by the majority of faculty to very good teaching."

As a whole, Connell sees EMU as a friendly university committed to its students. "You often hear about a relatively large state university as being anonymous and unconcerned, but I don't get that feeling here."

As associate provost, Connell extends that feeling of commitment. Between meetings and other responsibilities, she has very little free time. "We are currently in the midst of the promotions, re-appointments and tenure process," Connell explained. She pointed to four large form-filled boxes stacked in a corner of her office. "Those are just the requests and documentation for promotions."

There is a lot more to being associate provost than just attending meetings and "paper-pushing" though, and that is what Connell likes most about her job—its diversity. "When the phone rings, you never know who it's going to be, from a person wanting a clarification of policy to someone asking me to help develop a new program."

Connell believes the hardest part of her job is finding resources. "I get far more requests for things than I have resources," she said. As an example, Connell referred to faculty and departments asking for additional travel opportunities. "I feel these are useful, good things, but I can't always get the extra $1,000 for them to go and read their papers somewhere."

Having been a professor, Connell feels she can identify with the faculty, a definite asset in her position. "You get a certain credibility if you've been a faculty member when you work with faculty. There is little about the faculty perception, of what they need or what's wrong, that I haven't experienced myself as a faculty member," she said.

When asked if she missed teaching, Connell replied, "You miss your discipline, whatever you spent all that time studying in grad school. But I taught for a long time and now I'm doing something different." According to Connell, the change was "absolutely worth it."

Though Connell no longer teaches British history, she still has a great interest in the field. She is a local member of the Americal Historical Society and a specialty group called the American Committee for Irish Studies.

Also, in 1984, Connell published "The Roman Catholic Church in England 1780-1850: A Study in Internal Politics," which is on the publication list of the American Philosophical Society.

Connell has even brought a touch of British history to her home in Ann Arbor. "My whole house is filled with pictures of England and English kings and queens," she said. Even her cats are named after English queens.

Besides British history, Connell enjoys classical music and is "in the process of testing all the classical music spots in Detroit and Ann Arbor.

Being associate provost doesn't allow her much free time for other activities, but she doesn't seem to mind. When she applied for the job in 1984, Connell felt the position was perfect for her. Today, it looks as though she was right.

Statewide police training program under way at EMU

Some 40 police officers representing 23 Michigan police agencies will begin a 10-month training program on the campus of EMU Monday, February 11.

The School of Police Staff and Command, a nationally renowned training program presented by the Traffic Institute of Northwestern University, will provide competency-based training for first-line and mid-level police supervisors preparing for senior level positions within their agencies.

This is the first time the Northwestern Traffic Institute has taken its program out of the state of Illinois. The program is considered one of the top three in the U.S. in police staff and command training.

The training program is funded by a $56,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Management and Budget and a $25,000 grant from the Michigan Department of State Police, Office of Highway Safety Planning. The project director is Sgt. Gerald Lawver of the EMU Public Safety Department.

The 400-hour course will run one week each month for the next 10 months. The program is specifically targeted toward personnel from smaller law enforcement agencies which typically do not have the manpower or resources to send officers to extended training sessions. Agencies represented in the EMU training program will include the Ann Arbor Police Department, the Antrim Police Department, the Detroit Police Department, the EMU Public Safety Department, the Fraser Department of Public Safety, the Garden City Police Department, the Grand Traverse County Sheriff Department, the Lincoln Park Police Department, the Michigan State Police, the Monroe City Police Department, the Mt. Pleasant Public Safety Department, the Oak Park Public Safety Department, the Perry Police Department, the Pittsfield Police Department, the Riverview Police Department, the Sterling Heights Police Department, the Taylor Police Department, the Traverse City Police Department, the Troy Police Department, the Van Buren Township Police Department, the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department and the Ypsilanti Police Department.

Six courses will be studied during the training program, and up to 10 hours of college credit may be earned through the EMU Department of Interdisciplinary Technology. The courses will include The Management Process, Police Personnel Management, Policy and Administration of Police Agencies, Skills for Effective Police Management, Senior Command and Staff Officers.

Goals of the program include improving knowledge about the administrative function, clarifying and developing an understanding of the executive's job, increasing skill in organizing, staff and administering an organization, increasing ability in making decisions and formulating plans, improving communication skills, increasing ability to analyze and make effective use of traffic data, developing skills in determining manpower needs and effectively using manpower and equipment, developing concepts and guidelines for managing within the legal framework of administrative law, understanding and dealing with specific issues in police personnel management, developing skills in budgeting and cost benefit analysis, recognizing the importance and capabilities of computers and computer software and more effective use of time in accomplishing goals.

Panel will discuss employer responses to rising health costs

A Panel discussion titled "Employers Responses to the Rising Costs of Health Care: Fitness and Wellness Programs" will be presented by EMU Thursday, Feb. 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the University Sheraton Inn, State Road at I-94 in Ann Arbor.

The discussion is the fourth in the "Adapting to a Changing World" series sponsored by EMU's College of Education and College of Health and Human Services in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education. The series is designed to explore current educational and health care issues.

Panelists will include Richard N. Sarns, president of Sarns, Inc., Ann Arbor; Jerry Zerbe, Director of Community Education Programs in the Flint Community Schools; Paul Derwich, Community Education Specialist for the Livonia Public Schools; Dr. Roger Williams, professor of health, physical education, recreation and dance at EMU, and Dr. Duane Laws, EMU professor of human, environmental and consumer resources.

The lecture is free and open to the public. For more information, call 7-3134.

Roger Williams

Regent William Simmons was elected chairman of the Board of Regents Feb. 7. Regent Geneva Young Titsworth was chosen as vice-chairwoman, while Robert Romkema, EMU's vice president of finance, was appointed treasurer. Roy Wilbanks, secretary to the president for government and community relations, will serve as secretary to the Board.

Both Simmons and Titsworth were appointed to the Board in March 1983, replacing Carleton K. Rush and James T. Barnes Jr.

Research

Exercise Research Program

The National Institute on Aging grant program focuses on research to define how the aging process affects biological responses to physical activity and to assess how physical activity promotes health and prevents age-related disorders. Areas of particular interest are:

- quantification of criteria for safe exercise
- examination of how physical activity influences behavior and psychosocial function
- to define the link between exercise and nutrition
- how aging affects biological adaptation to exercise from the cellular/molecular level to the system/organ level
- effects of exercise on the immune system.

Application deadlines are March 1, July 1, and Nov. 1. Contact R. Howard at 7-3090 for application information.

Research Program in Telecommunications

The Michigan Divestiture Research Fund will support studies that focus on current telecommunication problems that have arisen as an outgrowth of the divestiture of American Telephone and Telegraph and other changes that are transforming the telephone industry. The results of the studies should make a contribution toward improving the basis for public policy formulation in Michigan.

Research proposals on the following topics are invited: the impact of different approaches to intrastate/interLATA access pricing; cost standards for setting prices in monopoly markets; potential loss in universal service associated with using exchange rates; options for providing adequate basic telephone service; impact of resale of telephone services and facilities; and effect of relaxing restrictions on Bell Operation Company.

Preliminary proposals are due Feb. 28, 1985. Contact R. Howard for further information.

Columbian Quincentenary

The year 1992 marks the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus's discovery of the New World. In recognition of this event, the National Endowment for the Humanities is encouraging scholarly and public consideration of topics central to the understanding of world history during the past five centuries.

Proposals are invited for original scholarship on related topics and for the dissemination of new and existing scholarship through conferences, public lectures, exhibitions, educational programs and the media. Appropriate areas of concentration include: the expansion of European civilization through the efforts of the Spanish and Portuguese crowns; the transformations that created new societies and new forms of cultural expressions through the encounters of native American, European and African peoples; and the political, religious, philosophical, scientific, technological and aesthetic ideas that shaped the processes of exploration, settlement and cultural conflict, and transformation, set into motion by Columbus's journey.

For further information on this program, contact Cheryl Kozell at 7-3090.

Helping Seniors Check Out

Students who have completed 70 credits or more and were enrolled at EMU the previous semester automatically receive a pre-printed senior check-out request card at Registration. If students do not receive such a card, they may obtain it in Room 2, Pierce Hall. Evening students or others unable to go to Room 2 during the day may submit a written request to obtain a card.

Cards are filed in the office of Academic Records and processed according to expected graduation date. A senior checker verifies the credit hours taken and records the credit hours still needed. One copy of this report is mailed to the student, the second copy of this report is mailed to the department of the student's major and the final copy is filed in the Records Office. If students have questions about their senior check-out, they should go to the Records Office.

Please announce to your students that if they are planning to graduate at the end of this semester, they should go to Room 2, Pierce to fill out an application for graduation as soon as possible.

Residence Requirements

Candidates for the bachelor's degree must earn at least 30 semester hours at EMU. Of these 30 hours, a minimum of 15 hours must be taken on campus. The remaining 15 hours may be taken off campus.

Of the last 30 semester hours, prior to the granting of the bachelor's degree, at least 10 hours must be taken in courses offered by EMU, either on or off campus.

There are no requirements that every student must live in a residence hall or must attend full-time for any specified period.

60 Hour Rule

Regardless of how many credits a student transfers from a community or junior college, the student must earn at least 60 semester hours of credit in academic course work exclusive of any community or junior college credit.

75 Hour Rule

When students have earned a total of 75 semester hours from whatever sources, no additional course work can be taken at a community or junior college for transfer to EMU.

A fellowship fund for the late James B. Campbell, former vice president for student affairs at EMU, has been established at the University of South Carolina in Columbia.

Campbell, who served as associate professor and vice president for student affairs at USC, died in December 1984 after a lengthy illness. Memorials can be made to the University of South Carolina Educational Foundations for the James B. Campbell Fellowship Fund, Columbia, S.C. 29208.
