

LOEX QUARTERLY

Volume 45, Number 3, Fall 2018

Publishing the Quarterly takes a good deal of work and when I originally started this position (over ten years ago!), it was just myself working with that issue's authors & columnists. Over time, as we've expanded what the Quarterly publishes (e.g., Book Review; Interview), I have enlisted some help.

So a few years ago, the Quarterly has had an Associate Editor, and recently we appointed a new one, Andrew Walsh. He works at Sinclair Community College and has already begun to help me with article selection and initial editing. Fitting for his background, we hope to feature more writing from community colleges, so hopefully that effort will bear fruit in the future. Relatedly, I would like to thank Ethan Pullman from Carnegie Mellon for his help over the past couple of years in that role. He's a very busy man and I appreciate his assistance and advice over the years.

In this issue of the Quarterly, we have an article that gives an introduction to Sci-Hub and the ethical codes that can help guide its use. In TechMatters, we review an online organization tool that can help you manage your work & instructional time and organize your life. Our Book Review is on presentation skills & knowledge and numerous evidence-based ideas for how you can be better. Finally, we end with an interview of an award-winning librarian whose programs are making a real impact on making courses student-centered at his university.

Happy instructing,

Brad Sietz
Director
