EMU to participate in Ypsilanti business survey

EMU and the Ypsilanti Area Chamber of Commerce will be co-sponsoring a business and industrial survey project as part of the Michigan Bell Business Retention and Expansion Program.

The Ypsilanti Area Industrial Survey, which was announced today (March 24) at a reception at Washtenaw Community College, will be conducted in conjunction with the City of Ypsilanti, and Superior, Pittsfield and Ypsilanti Townships.

Implemented by trained volunteers, the survey is part of a study of the local industrial climate. Its purpose is to maintain and improve that climate by establishing ongoing communication and obtaining the opinions of business leaders about the local economy, government services and long- and short-range business expansion and location plans.

More than 100 local firms are expected to take part in the extensive interview process which assures the confidentiality of individual responses. The statistical results of the survey will be released once total responses are compiled.

Jane McCormick, administrator of Beyer Memorial Hospital, will serve as project manager, providing overall management and leadership for its completion. Project facilitators will be Dr. Charles Monsma, professor at EMU and representative of the Higher Education Consortium for Economic Development; Daniel

Tennow, president of the Ypsilanti Area Chamber of Commerce; and Steven Balasia, manager of economic development at Michigan Bell.

According to EMU President John W. Porter, the University's involvement in the project is appropriate. "We cannot talk about the well-being of the University community without talking about the vitality of the greater Ypsilanti area. With the support of the consortium, we, at EMU, are proud to play an essential part in this effort and look forward to the release of the study's results in the fall," he said.

Ypsilanti Chamber President Tennow also is enthusiastic about the project. "We are in a period of tremendous growth, and for this reason alone, the project could not be more timely," he said. "Through the project results, and the recommendations of the task force, we will be better able to manage this growth effectively."

A task force of local business, government and educational leaders will be working to implement the project and will make recommendations based on the survey results. Serving of this

Minority task force established at EMU

EMU President John W. Porter announced March 25 the creation of a Presidential Task Force on Minority Conditions at the University.

The task force will be charged with reviewing the conditions which have created racial tensions on other campuses; reviewing the representation of minorities among the faculty and administration; reviewing minority student retention; and documenting evidence of any racial incidents on EMU's campus.

"In light of recent well-publicized racial incidents on other campuses, I think it is both appropriate and prudent for Eastern Michigan University to establish this task force to assess current conditions on our campus," said Dr. Porter in making the announcement. "We need to evaluate progress to date in achieving our enrollment and employment goals and to identify any problems which may exist as well as recommendations for their resolution."

The task force will be chaired by Roy Watts, associate professor of social work. Other members of the task force will include Hector Garza, assistant dean of the Graduate School; Jay Weinstein, head of the Department of Sociology; Joanne Hansen, coordinator of science and technology in the Center for Learning Resources and Technologies; Amelia Chan, coordinator of undergraduate advising in the College of Business; Albert Robinson, manager of service operations; Dr. John Burkhardt, director of institutional advancement; Dr. Helen Burnstad, director of Human Resource Development.

Also serving on the task force will be Courtney McAnuff, dean of admissions and financial aid; Lynette Findley, associate dean of housing; Dr. Leslie Bates, associate dean of special student services; Glenna Frank Miller, director of Campus Life; Greg Schupra, coordinator of planned giving; Darryl McMiller, student; and Anna Crisovan, president of the student body.

A progress report is expected to be completed by the end of April and a final report from the task force is scheduled for release by the end of August.

Hawks Appointed To Top State Ed. Post

Gary Hawks, former vice president for University Relations at EMU from 1972 to 1981, was appointed interim state superintendent for instruction March 26. He replaces Phillip Runkel who resigned to become president of Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City.

ORD To Offer Released Time Appointments

The Office of Research Development will award 50 percent released time appointments for spring to faculty for the development of proposals for external funding of research, program development or creative projects.

Applications for the appointments are due Monday, April 6.

Call ORD, at 7-3090, for more information.

Organ Recital To Feature French Music

The final organ recital in this year's EMU organ recital series will take place Monday, April 6, at 8 p.m. in Pease Auditorium.

EMU organ students will perform French music from the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries. Also, EMU student Gini Robison will play the harpsichord.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Spring Blood Drive Set For March 31

EMU's 1987 faculty/staff spring blood drive will be Tuesday, March 31, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in McKenny Union.

Snow Health Center staff are encouraging people to bring a "buddy" along when they donate to serve as a donor as well.

Appointments are not required; donors may walk in any time during the scheduled hours. To avoid waiting, however, appointments may be made by calling Snow at 7-1122.

Dance Association To Meet At EMU

The Region IV group of the Michigan Dance Association will meet in EMU's Warner Building Wednesday, April 1, at 7 p.m.

The meeting will address the needs and concerns of dancers in the Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti and Jackson areas. Participants will have an opportunity to express ideas benefiting the dance community, as well as plan future dance events in their area.

For more information about the MDA meeting, contact Dr. Joann McNamara, assistant professor of health, physical education, recreation and dance, at 7-0090.

Library To Hold Book Sale

The University Library will hold a book sale Monday, April 6, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Library Lobby.

Students and staff will find a wide variety of used books which have come to the Library as gifts and are duplicates of titles the Library already holds. The book subjects include fiction, history, education, social sciences and more.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to acquire needed library materials.

Political Science To Hold Annual Awards Banquet

The Political Science Department will hold its Annual Awards Banquet Friday, April 3, at 6:30 p.m. in Hoyt Conference Center.

Roy Wilbanks, vice president for university relations, will serve as keynote speaker.

Outstanding political science students will be honored with several awards and induction into Phi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honor society.

For more information, call the Political Science Department at 7-3113.

39th Honors Convocation set for April 5

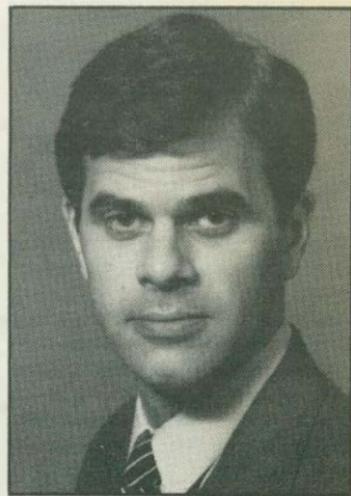

Approximately 3,777 students will be recognized for outstanding academic achievement during the past academic year at EMU Sunday, April 5, at 3 p.m. in Pease Auditorium during the University's 39th Annual Honors Convocation.

Dr. Robert Holkeboer, professor of English language and literature and director of EMU's Honors Program, will serve as faculty speaker at the ceremony and Angeline Beltsos, a pre-medicine major in the Biology Department, will be the featured student speaker.

Presiding over the ceremony will be Grand Marshal Dr. Peggy Steig, professor emeritus of health, physical education, recreation and dance. Dr. J. Jan Jellema, associate professor of industrial technology, and Dr. Janice J. Terry, professor of history and philosophy, will serve as faculty marshals.

The honors list includes all EMU students with cumulative grade point averages of 3.0 (B) or better on a scale which extends to 4.0 (A). Approximately 589 freshmen, 663 sophomores, 862 juniors and 1,663 seniors will be honored.

Of those students to be honored, 16 have maintained perfect (4.0) academic records.

Holkeboer

Four freshmen, two sophomores, seven juniors and three seniors will be recognized for earning all A's during the past year. They are:

W.D. Snodgrass to present poetry reading April 2

Pulitzer Prize-winning poet W.D. Snodgrass will present a poetry reading and slide show at EMU Thursday, April 2, at 8 p.m. in Sponberg Theater.

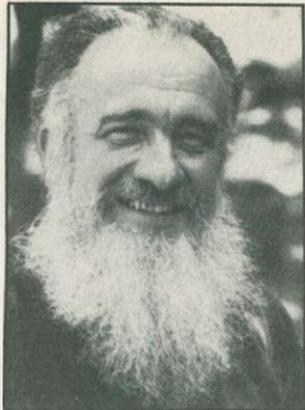

Snodgrass, who was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1960 for his first volume of poetry titled "Heart's Needle," will read from his most recent volume of poetry, "The Death of Cock Robin," which is expected to be published in late spring by the University of Delaware Press.

Snodgrass's appearance at EMU precedes the presentation of "The Fuhrer Bunker" on campus.

Snodgrass wrote "The Fuhrer Bunker," a book of poetry detailing the last days of the Third Reich, in 1977. He and Dr. Annette Martin, EMU professor of communication and theater arts, have adapted the book for the stage. That adaptation will be performed by EMU theater students April 3 through 5 and 9 through 11 in Quirk Theater.

According to Martin, who has worked on the script for the last year, Snodgrass called the final product "brilliant." The book has been adapted to the stage three times before, said Martin, and Snodgrass "thinks this is the finest version that he's seen. He's very excited to be here and we've had a couple of inquiries about publishing the script."

Martin describes the two-act, two-hour adaptation, which she also is directing, as "stunningly theatrical."

Snodgrass

Martin

"It is experimental, but it will affect the audience the way any play does," she said. "It's very emotionally gripping and it addresses issues that parallel our society."

The book, "The Fuhrer Bunker," contains 20 poems, but Snodgrass has written approximately 40 more on the same subject for use in the adaptation. "There's an illusion of dialogue that's created because of the way the poems are used together," said Martin.

The play also will feature an original musical score by Ann Arbor musician Dick Siegel who will perform the music live on a digital synthesizer.

Snodgrass has published several other books of poetry including "After Experience" in 1967 and "Platoons and File" in 1983.

A member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and a Fellow of the Academy of American Poets, Snodgrass has received numerous fellowships in poetry including those from the Hudson Review and the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial. He presently is on the faculty at the University of Delaware.

Tickets for Snodgrass's reading are free and available at the EMU Arts and Entertainment Box Office in Quirk Theater Monday through Friday from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.

For more information, contact EMU's Office of Campus Life at 7-3045.

For more information about the play, call the Box Office at 7-1221.

Registration and Friday's events will take place at the Marriott Inn in Ann Arbor. There, A.J. Bondy, professor of mathematics at the University of Waterloo in Ontario, will deliver the conference's keynote address titled "Cycles in Clawfree Graphs" during a dinner at 8:30 p.m. Also, some of the research presentations will be delivered Friday afternoon at the Marriott Inn. Saturday, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., the presentations will continue in Room 324 Pray-Harold Classroom Building on EMU's Campus.

The presentations are free and open to the public.

The public also is invited to attend Friday's dinner, which will cost $13.95 per person.

For more information, or to make reservations for the dinner, contact Dr. Don R. Lick, head of EMU's Math Department, at 7-1444.

EMU to host Midwest Graph Theory Conference

EMU will host the Mighty XI Midwest Graph Theory Conference Friday and Saturday, April 10 and 11, in Pray-Harold Classroom Building.

The conference will bring together graph theorists from colleges and universities in the Midwest and Canada to discuss recent research in the graph theory field of mathematics.

Twenty-four speakers will present papers and discuss the results of research projects they

Week-long workshop will focus on Michigan history

EMU will offer a week-long workshop on Michigan history for social studies and history teachers, museum and history enthusiasts and undergraduate students Monday through Friday, June 22-26, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on EMU's campus.

Taught by Dr. JoEllen Vinyard, professor in the Department of History and Philosophy and a Michigan history expert, the workshop will combine classroom lecture with manuscript and document study and field trips. Also, guest scholars will speak during the workshop on Michigan's "first feminist" Sojourner Truth, the history of the Catholic Church in Michigan, politics of public education in Michigan and the G. Mennen Williams years.

The workshop also will include bus tours to the Reuther Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs, Monroe Historical Museum, Ypsilanti Historical Museum, Detroit Historical Museum and Wayne State University Press.

According to Vinyard, the course will be especially useful to primary and secondary education teachers interested in incorporating Michigan history lessons into their classrooms in recognition of Michigan's Sesquicentennial.

Workshop assignments will require that participants develop material for direct application to classroom teaching or to satisfy individual research interests in Michigan's history. Although the workshop ends June 26, assignments will not be due until Monday, Aug. 10.

Vinyard, a new professor at EMU, earned a bachelor's degree from Nebraska State College, a master's degree from the University of Nebraska and a doctorate from the University of Michigan. She taught at Wisconsin State University and Marygrove College in Detroit prior to coming to EMU.

An expert on Detroit history, Vinyard published a book on the history of the city's Irish-American community in 1976 and presently is conducting a study on parochial school education in 19th century Detroit.

The workshop will be offered under the course number History 479 for three credit hours.

Tuition and fees will be $162 per person.

The workshop is being partially funded by a grant from the Michigan Council for the Humanities.

For more information, contact Vinyard at 7-0053.

Seminar to discuss 'red tape' of international trade

Partners in Export Promotion, a program in EMU's College of Business, will sponsor a seminar titled "Cutting Red Tape in International Trade" Thursday, April 2, at 8:45 a.m. at the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce.

PEP is a non-profit program funded by a U.S. Department of Education grant to EMU designed to help businesses increase exports from the southeast Michigan region.

Through a series of lectures, the seminar will discuss the need to cut international red tape, show techniques for strategic management, identify patent and trademark issues, introduce licensing and joint ventures, explore the rules governing technology transfer and introduce transportation logistics.

Among the speakers are Dr. Stewart L. Tubbs, dean of EMU's College of Business; Dr. David A.

Victor, assistant professor of management and project director of PEP; John F. Misterovich, director of international marketing at Federal-Mogul World Trade in Southfield; Dr. Pradeep Chowdhry, associate professor of management at EMU; Dr. Daryl Negendank, assistant professor of business law at EMU; Murray S. Levin, a partner in Pepper, Hamilton and Scheetz in Philadelphia and president of the International Association of Young Attorneys in Brussels, Belgium; Dr. Patricia Weber, associate dean of EMU's College of Business; and Michael McCarthy, president of Trans-Overseas Corp. in Detroit.

Registration fees are $45 in advance or $55 at the door.

For more information, call the PEP Program Development Office at 7-0025 after noon.

WEMU misses goal in fund-raiser

EMU's public radio station, WEMU-FM (89.1), closed its spring fund-raiser March 25 just a few dollars short of its $40,000 goal.

Pledges telephoned into the station during the week-long "on-the-air" fundraiser totaled $36,726, according to Bill Humphries, manager of marketing and development, "As long as we get 85 percent of that in we'll be in good shape," said Humphries, "and we usually get 90 percent (of the pledged money)."

WEMU holds two phone-pledge fund-raisers each year, one in October and one in March. According to Humphries, they raise about 25 percent of the station's nearly $400,000 in yearly operating costs. The October fund-raiser reached its $45,000 goal just under the wire on the campaign's last day. "We think we'll meet our June goal of $102,000," said Humphries.

Other station financing comes from underwriters of its regular shows and a mass-mailing campaign.

Van Riper juggles job, family and community activities

EMU's Madelon Van Riper works in Human Resources and participates in community activities, but says "My biggest profession is raising my five children."

EMU's Madelon Van Riper knows how to deal with people. She has to—it's part of her job. As administrative secretary to the Executive Director of Human Resources, Van Riper coordinates that office's functions with the Human Resources Offices of Legal Affairs, Benefit Compensation Programs, Employment/Affirmative Action, Employee Relations and Human Resources Development. Although this is her primary role in Human Resources, she also sees herself as a University "ombudsman" in that she spends part of her time assisting people who need help. "Sometimes people, including students, call this office as a last resort. And after dealing with this for four years, I've learned where to send people when they call with a problem," she said.

In her job, Van Riper is able to use her people skills, and she is able to look at those skills analytically. She says she tries not to get involved with individual personalities and this helps her deal with difficult people. Also, she tries not to have preconceived notions about people.

"Individuals are individuals and that is what makes everyone special," she said.

Van Riper notes that another very important part of her job is confidentiality. "Because of the nature of the executive director's job, I find out a lot of sensitive things first hand," she said.

Van Riper has been employed at EMU for seven years. She started her career here in the College of Business as a temporary secretary, even though her secretarial skills were not yet developed. But, she said that the dean at that time was knowledgeable in office skills and taught her what she needed to know.

After serving in the College of Business for two years in various jobs, Van Riper worked for "just about every" academic department of campus before going to Human Resources in 1984.

"Working in the University environment is exciting," she said. "The atmosphere is wonderful! There is such a diversity of people—people who all have different ways of looking at life and dealing with problems."

Before coming to the University, Van Riper, who earned a bachelor's degree from Adrian College, worked as a junior high and high school teacher for the Fraser School District where she taught physical education, mathematics and science.

"Kids at that age are great," she said. "Working with them was such a rewarding pleasure."

Van Riper said that although she loved teaching and finds her current position a challenge, "My biggest profession is raising my five children."

"Besides the one who is a senior in high school, all of my children are college-educated. It's been a challenge raising them, but it has been well worth it," she said.

Even though EMU plays an important role in Van Riper's life, she tries to be active as she can in community activities when she is not on campus. "My son is a senior at Ypsilanti High School so I try to be as involved with it as I can," she said.

In addition, Van Riper has volunteered to serve as parade chairman for Ypsilanti's Heritage Festival in August. Part of her responsibilities include coordinating the many parade committees planning the event, mapping a parade route and selecting the different participants in the parade.

"So far, it has not taken too much time," she said. "But I expect that the closer it gets to August, the more the pace is going to pick up."

Community College Transfer Credits

If a student asks about taking additional credits at a community college, first ask how many credits the student will have completed from all sources before attempting the transfer course.

Then, consider the 75-Hour Rule. When EMU students have earned a total of 75 semester hours from whatever sources, no additional course work may be taken at a community or junior college for transfer to EMU.

Then, consider the 60-Hour Rule. Regardless of how many credits a student transfers from a community or junior college, the student must earn at least 60 hours of credit in academic course work exclusive of any community or junior college credit. This often means that the 60 hours are from EMU, but they may include courses from other sources such as accredited four-year institutions, military credit and credit by exams. At least 30 of the 60 hours must be from EMU. See page 28 of the 1986-87 catalog.

For EMU students, course work taken at another school during fall 1986 or later must have a C or higher grade to be accepted. When transferred, the course becomes "non-index credit" at EMU. That is, this transfer credit is not used at all in calculation of any grade point average.

Repeats of EMU grades, beginning in fall 1986, are no longer permitted by taking the course again at another institution to be transferred back to EMU. Poor EMU grades may be repeated only by taking them again at EMU. This is an important change that may affect the plans of your students, especially in the coming spring or summer.

Academic Records, in cooperation with the academic departments, provides equivalency course lists for all Michigan community and junior colleges.

Guest lecturer to discuss Latin American art

EMU will host Hope Palmer, lecturer for the statewide services program of the Detroit Institute of Arts, who will give two slide lectures on modern Latin American art Thursday, April 9, and Thursday, April 16, at 7 p.m. in the Main Lounge of EMU's McKenny Union.

Palmer's April 9 lecture is titled "Harbingers of the Modern Movement" and the April 16 lecture is titled "The Images Realized: Recent Directions in Latin American Art."

The slide-illustrated lectures will trace the roots of Latin American art from the early works of Atl, Rivera, Orozco and Siqueiros through the later works of Kahlo, Botero, Lam, Matta and others.

Palmer received her master's degree in art history from the University of Michigan. She has taught humanities at Wayne State University and presently teaches painting and drawing at Henry Ford Community College. She also is an art historian and lecturer at the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association.

The DIA's statewide services lecture program is funded by the state of Michigan.

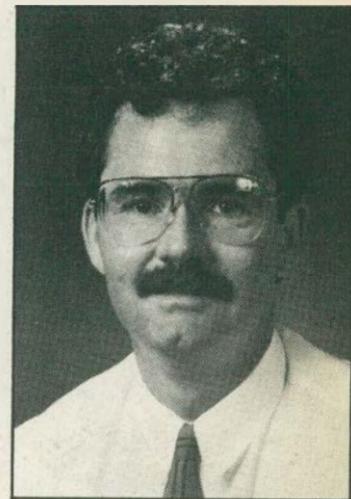

Kisor wins national art award

Douglas Kisor, assistant professor of art at EMU, recently won first place in the National Association of Campus Activities annual graphic arts competition.

Kisor's work was entered in the professionally-designed multi-color poster category by EMU's Office of Campus Life. The subject of Kisor's work was the Peace Poster exhibit in EMU's Ford Art Gallery in October 1986. The exhibit honored the anniversary of the Hiroshima bombing and was highlighted by a visit by Steff Geissbuhler, a renowned graphic artist. The exhibit was sponsored by Campus Life's EMU Residency Series.

The award was presented to Campus Life representatives who attended the NACA National Conference in Nashville, Tenn., in February. NACA is a professional organization for administrators and students involved in planning college campus activities.

Kisor has been a member of the EMU faculty since 1983. He holds a bachelor's degree in fine arts from Michigan State University and earned a master's degree in fine arts from Western Michigan University in 1983. He has worked as an instructor at WMU and also as senior designer for Justin Ward Advertising.
