T.RURAL EDUCATION

The leading features of the Rural Education Department during the year ending April 30, were the training of standard teachers in the four training centers: the Youngstown Training Center, the Akron Training Center, the Ohio State University Training Center, and the Ohio University Training Center. The training courses were designed to prepare teachers for the rural schools of the state. The courses included both theoretical and practical work, with an emphasis on fieldwork and classroom management. The Rural Education Department also provided technical assistance to rural school districts, including advice on curriculum development and resource utilization.

HATCH HERD CLASS A MILK

When Dr. McCracken discovered the richness in pure milk and its indispensable relation to our health and growth, he soon pronounced it "the most important contribution to the upshot's embracing of foods during the last 100 years." "We feel it," says Dr. McCracken in his "How to Teach the Public Regarding Food Values.

"Everyone, should be taught that it is a mistake to feed cows raw milk, even one drop. Cows have a foot of milk each day." The CLASS A Milk is the ideal skimmed milk, vitamin rich for students to face their school and maintain complete solar efficiency during these instructive college days. Served at the Ypsilanti Hotel and Ypsilanti near the water tower. Ask for Hatch Herb (Class A Milk).

INTERESTED IN M. S. N. C.?
Athletics, Lectures, Plays, Music Recitals, College Komedies, Etc., Etc., Etc.? Why, most certainly! And in all Venues—Past, Present, and Future! Notwithstanding all the blackboard “Sketches” of novice critics and the malicious hangarous of soap box spouters, we are deeply interested and vitally concerned in all that pertains to our Normal College, and can and will demonstrate our conviction to all comers who treat us white.

THE STANLEY STORE—By The Chief Mogul

NAT. SCIENCE CLUB
The Natural Science Club was pleasantly entertained Monday evening by H. A. Rodock, one of our degree students, who related his varying experiences in keeping animals in school. The small town teacher is generally known as “Prof” and Prof Rodock was continually having strange beasties brought to his laboratory. Among them were the whole-billed grebe, the best duck to ever saw, who cleaned out the aquarium overnight, and the green heron, or “slide-police,” who showed manifestly to swallow a fish seven inches long, the tail of which remained sticking out of his bill. There were frogs who would pump several inches high for their meal-children, clearly expressing their preference for beef. There were turtle and fishes who daily engaged in mild combat over their bits of meat, one matching it from the other, who coveting the third, would recover it only to have it restored before he could swallow it.

Mr. Rodock read aloud an account of a Jersey turtle who was twice deported from a certain tomato pond. He twice returned to the local areas of his childhood, one return, after a five-year absence, necessitating feeding a river. We listened also to the account, written by Prof. Alexander of Cornell, of his pet pal, Peter, for whose meals the professor had to make several nine mile fourth each day.

The Parent/Teacher Club of the Training School place a seventy-five cent dinner and a dance on November 11. The rival of the Training School is assuming more importance on the campus than ever before. They are having their meetings the first Thursday in every month when the same one grade gives a demonstration lesson and then a topic of vital interest to every girl and boy is discussed. Finding that there are many things which the Training School needs and other useful undertakings can be started, they decided to have this supper and a dance in the gymnasium on Arboretum Day, and hope to meet there every student in Michigan State Normal College as well as the people of the town. Save November 11, for the Parent-Teacher Club and enjoy a splendid supper and dance.
