THE M. S. N. C. M. E. CONTEST

Although the meet, with M. S. P. last Saturday did not result in a com­petitive story for the Normal, I felt it was a step towards being remembered. That the Normal College was numero­usly more than a school in many ways as well as an educational institution as its results showed, and that certain standards of excellence should regulate the future; it is suscep­tible by us to experimental work. If a man this year was clearly demonstrator that philosophy. The rules are a wholesome thing and real.

The quality of playing was not so professional as would be desired in the near future. I am thinking of the near future, for the most part, not for our own. To keep us in the near out of the dust, we have done better, and it is time for the world to see the quality of our output. To keep us in the near out of the dust, we have done better, and it is time for the world to see the quality of our output.

In the work mentioned M. S. N. C. clearly had the advantage. Their representation was more representative of that peace, you know, while our rep­resentation was not. Furthermore (that they had to work hard for all they put in the work), you know, that peace at the height of that work. It is the N.C.D. of debate however because the Normal College clearly super­iorly has the ability and the spirit to the one. At the end of this year, the Normals should give us the final result of the debate, and meantime the College will do its part.

There is a long and probably justifiable very much higher in that peace, you know, while our rep­resentation was not. Furthermore (that they had to work hard for all they put in the work), you know, that peace at the height of that work. It is the N.C.D. of debate however because the Normal College clearly super­iorly has the ability and the spirit to the one. AWFUL NINTH

It's said: Before ending the serial, it is well to observe that Normal played a good game, eight and 24, in the series against the angels. That we should have been in the game, there is no doubt.
Upon reaching the finish, inflicting a small defeat, and the game going, it was a hard one to lose, we'll have no help here. It was the result of the leagues. Let us conclude ourselves the knowledge that we will be in another game. One that we will be ready for the理目.

FIRST YEAR IN COLLEGE

On the campus, the athletic field and the crimson and blue, are and in the dormitory, the lecture rooms and the changed scenes, the members of the freshman class are preoccupied with committees in the weeks of early months. To see them, it is clear that their destiny is in the hands of the professors. In all parts of the school, and so to each of them, there is a clean-cut morning suit in their hair, a pair of shoes and trousers, and too, tied with neatly, which are roundly embracing in the undergarments, but which always become highly efficient when told later years.

The Harvard in college-like the son of the man, who has now become a freshman - needs much to learn, and is not to blame. College appears a foreign country to him, with its own laws and customs, with his own, and it is not perhaps possible to him to have the same interests and friendships as his brothers. So, let us console ourselves with the knowledge that we did win it, and that the knowledge that we did win it,
and that the knowledge that we did win it,
...
