Sprandel's 'wise counsel' and many contributions to EMU will be missed

Dr. Dorian Sprandel, associate vice president for university marketing and student affairs, died Wednesday, March 11, at his home in Ann Arbor after a long illness.

Sprandel, 50, had been on leave from the University since October, suffering from an inoperable brain tumor.

He first joined the EMU staff in 1965 as coordinator of University Housing, and left in 1967 to become a research assistant at Michigan State University while pursuing his doctorate there. Sprandel returned to EMU in 1970 as director of University Housing, became director of housing, food services and auxiliary services in 1973 and was promoted to executive director in the Division of University Marketing and Student Affairs in 1976. He was named that division's associate vice president in June 1990.

"On behalf of Eastern Michigan University, I extend our condolences to the family of Dorian Sprandel," said EMU President William

Sprandel

Shelton. "Dr. Sprandel served capably as an administrator of the University for 24 years. His contributions will be long remembered and our thoughts are with his family and friends during these difficult days."

Sprandel was involved in many areas of the University, from policy development to the administration of the student affairs program. Just prior to his illness, he spearheaded a project, currently underway, to renovate McKenny Union into a full-service student union aimed primarily at serving the needs of commuter students.

"Dr. Sprandel was a valuable colleague and good friend of mine for 17 years. His numerous contributions to the quality of University life have enriched us all," said Laurence N. Smith, vice president for University marketing and student affairs. "Dorian was never really comfortable with public accolades; however, I'm sure that the aspect of his work he would be most proud of and pleased with—in the best of our tradition—was the positive difference he made in the lives of so many of our students."

"We will miss Dr. Sprandel's wise counsel and significant involvement," Smith added. "He had so much more to contribute that it is tragic his life was cut so short."

Shelton To Present Critical Overview Of Fiscal Challenges Thursday

Wrapping up the series of open budget hearings which began two weeks ago, EMU President William E. Shelton will present his perspective on the fiscal challenges and opportunities facing the University Thursday, March 19, from 9 to 11 a.m. in 201 Welch Hall.

Shelton's presentation will key in on the internal and external forces impacting EMU and will set the framework for budgetary decision making as the University enters the 1992-93 fiscal year.

The final divisional hearing, that of Academic Affairs, is Wednesday, March 18, from 9 to 11 a.m., also in 201 Welch.

Symposium features undergrad research

Presentations by 135 EMU undergraduates and a keynote address by Dr. Robert Coles, Pulitzer Prize-winning author/scholar and research psychiatrist at Harvard University, will mark Symposium XII—a day-long celebration of excellence in undergraduate creativity and research, Friday, March 20, beginning at 8:30 a.m. in McKenny Union.

Among the students' presentations will be samplings of the locally applicable, such as "The Arkona Landfill" and "Ypsilanti Commons Environmental Audit"; contemporary issues, such as "Black Women, Racism and the Quest for Social and Political Equality," "Internal Prison Control" and "Political Parties, the Electorate and the Mighty Dollar"; scientific studies, such as "Vinylogous Urethanes: Possible Precursors for Exocyclic Enamines" and "A Robotic Mission to Alpha Centauri"; and arts and humanities, such as "Choreographing 'Anything Goes,'" and "An Interactive

Business Education Offers Scholarship Information

The Business and Industrial Education Department currently is providing scholarship information on the Graziano Service Award for marketing education and office education majors and the Robinson Scholarship for business education students.

A Graziano Award will be awarded to a student in each of the represented areas who meets the following criteria: at least 60 credit hours completed, 12 of which must be in the College of Technology and 15 total earned at EMU; a grade point average of at least 2.5; and the student can't have been a previous award winner. Applicants also will be judged on their membership in a student organization related to business teacher education; membership or offices in other student organizations and/or committee assignments; special project service or activities; service to EMU; and service to the community.

Applications are due March 20 in Room 14 Sill Hall.

The Robinson Scholarship is for business education students who have completed 40 credit hours toward a bachelor's degree and have a "high cumulative grade point average." Applicants also are judged on the basis of a brief essay.

For more information on either award, call the Business and Industrial Education Department at 7-4330.

Alpha Phi Omega Plans Weeklong Blood Drive

Alpha Phi Omega national co-ed service fraternity will sponsor a Red Cross blood drive Monday through Friday, March 23-27, in the Downing Hall Recreation Room.

The drive will run from 1 to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 12:30 to 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Blood may be donated on a drop-in basis during those times.

Lecture To Explore Drug Abuse And Aging

Chemical dependency and aging will be the focus of the annual Gerontology Spring Lecture Wednesday, March 18, from 1:30 to 4 p.m. in the Tower Room of McKenny Union.

The featured speakers will be Jeff Smith, clinical supervisor in the Chelsea Hospital Older Adult Recovery Center; and Donna Dotson, director of the Older Adult Inpatient Unit. They will talk about identifying older adults with chemical dependency problems and describe various treatment approaches.

In addition, the Older Adult Recovery Center Players, a group of OARC alumni which performs dramatic skits illustrating geriatric chemical dependency problems and issues, will perform.

A closing reception will be held following the program, at approximately 3:15 p.m.

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, is being sponsored by EMU's Gerontological Society of America Student Organization and Gerontology Program with funding provided by EMU's Student Government.

For more information, call GSASO President Susan Procter at 464-0514.

Deadline Set For ORD Released Time Offers

Applications from faculty for released time appointments for the 1992 fall semester are due in the Office of Research Development by 4 p.m. Wednesday, March 25.

The ORD released time program offers one-quarter released time appointments for faculty interested in developing proposals for external support of research, program development, demonstration or creative projects.

For further information, call 7-3090.

FCIE Workshop Looks At Teaching Grad Students

The Faculty Center for Instructional Excellence will host a luncheon workshop titled "Teaching Graduate Students" Thursday, March 19, from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the Starkweather Hall Graduate Meeting Room.

It will feature Maureen McCormack of Teacher Education and Ray Hill of the Management Department discussing the special challenges in teaching graduate level students.

For more information, call the FCIE at 7-1386.

Scholarships Available For Graduate Students

Faculty are urged to encourage recent graduates or seniors enrolled in their final semester to apply for the Barton Scholarship Program, administered through the Graduate School.

Applicants must have grade point averages of 3.5 and must be candidates for admission into a graduate program at EMU or the University of Michigan. The scholarship award is a one-time payment of $500.

Several scholarships are available. Applications are available at the Graduate School in Starkweather Hall.

WEMU Fund-Raiser Starts March 20

WEMU-FM (89.1) will begin its annual spring on-air fund-raiser Friday March 20, with a goal to raise $42,000 from listener pledges and donations.

The campaign will continue daily from 6 a.m. to midnight through Tuesday, March 24. The station also has set a goal to receive pledges from at least 1,000 listeners.

For more information, call Mary Motherwell at 7-2229.

Deadline For Faculty Award Nominations Is March 27

Nominations for the 1992 Distinguished Faculty Awards are due Friday, March 27.

The annual awards are given in the areas of teaching, scholarly/creative activity and service to the University.

Nominations may be made by any faculty member, staff member or student and should be submitted to the nominee's department head. Supporting documents should be included with the nomination form, which is available in each department.

Winners will be chosen after review by a committee of EMU faculty members and by an external committee.

The 1991 winners were Dr. Carla Tayeh in the Teaching I category (less than five years teaching), Dr. Jerald Griess in the Teaching II category (more than five years), Dr. Richard Douglass in the scholarly/creative category and Dr. James Conley in the service to the University category.

For further nomination information, call the administrative associate to the provost at 7-2237.

Graduate School Has Fulbright Applications

Applications for the 1993-94 Fulbright Scholar awards for United States faculty and professionals currently are available from the Graduate School.

Scholars at all academic ranks are eligible to apply to the program, which provides 1,000 grants for research, combined research and lecturing, or university lecturing. Opportunities range from two months to a full academic year, with opening in more than 120 countries.

For more information, call Jeanne Clerc, acting associate dean in the graduate School, at 7-0042.

Rapper Queen Latifah scheduled

Afrocentric rap artist Queen Latifah, and opening acts, Brand Nubian and Prose N' Cons, will perform at Eastern Michigan University Sunday, March 22, at 8 p.m. in EMU's Bowen Field House.

Latifah's first album, "All Hail The Queen," won her a Grammy nomination and reached number six on Billboard Magazine's Rhythm and Blues Album chart. She was voted Best Female Rapper in the 1990 Rolling Stone Reader's Poll and was named Best New Rap Artist at the 1990 New Music Seminar. Her latest album is called "Nature of a Sista."

The 21-year-old rapper appeared in Spike Lee's "Jungle Fever," is in the forthcoming "House Party 2" and appeared on "The Fresh Prince of Bel Air" television show. She also was a vocalist with Troop and Levert on "For the Love of Money/Living for the City" from the "New Jack City" movie soundtrack and was guest vocalist for "Wickedest Man Alive" by Naughty by Nature.

On tour, she is backed up by a male singer, dancers and a drummer.

Invitation from the President

University Faculty and Staff:

I would like to extend an invitation to the entire University community to join us Friday, March 20, for the College of Arts and Sciences' Undergraduate Symposium.

Symposium XII will showcase the talents of 135 University students. With the support of their faculty sponsors—83 in all—undergraduate students will present research, projects, compositions, performances, documentaries and more.

This one-day, conference-like program will be held in McKenny Union from 8:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., with the lunch program beginning at 1 p.m.

Symposium XII is an opportunity to see firsthand the quality of Eastern Michigan University. It is the kind of student/faculty activity which epitomizes our teaching and learning commitment.

Join us Friday, March 20, in McKenny Union for Symposium XII.

Listener's Guide to Mozart's Opera, "The Magic Flute."

"The Undergraduate Symposium represents an opportunity to express the quality of Eastern Michigan University," said EMU President William E. Shelton. "We have many talented students, faculty and staff at Eastern and this is an excellent showcase for some of these talents. It is the kind of activity which emphasizes the teaching and learning commitment of our institution."

"Other than at the University of Minnesota, I believe this is the only presentation of undergraduate research of its kind," added Dennis Beagen, symposium planning committee chair and head of the Department of Communication and Theater Arts. "It most epitomizes what students do."

Following the students' presentations, at 1 p.m., a luncheon will be held featuring Coles' keynote address.

Coles, who also is professor of psychiatry and medical humanities at Harvard Medical School, has had more than 1,100 articles, reviews and essays published and is the author of 50 books including, "Children of Crisis," "The Middle Americans," "Women in Crisis" and "The Moral Life of Children."

He is co-founder and member of the board of directors for the newly established Center for Documentary Studies at Duke University. He is a contributing editor to The New Republic, Aperture, The American Poetry Review and The New Oxford Review.

Coles awards include the Ralph Waldo Emerson Prize of Phi Beta Kappa, Saturday Review's Anisfield-Wolf Award in Race Relations, the Hofheimer Award of the American Psychiatric Association, a 1973 Pulitzer Prize and a John D. and Catherine MacArthur Foundation Fellowship.

For more information, call Beagen at 7-3130.

Censorship, racism discussed at debate

By Jay Harkness

For the overflow crowd attending a "censorship debate" at EMU March 9, no feelings were suppressed as tempers flared on both sides of the podium.

The artistic-freedom-vs.-pornography debate was the last in the Office of Campus Life's "Lectures and Learning" series for the 1991-92 year.

The debate quickly departed from that topic, however, into a heated discussion about the invisible lines of racism and double-standards in America.

It featured Jack Thompson, a Florida attorney who spearheaded the effort to have the music of rap artists 2 Live Crew banned for obscenity, pitted against "Professor Griff" (Richard Griffin), a former rapper with Public Enemy.

While Griff said efforts to ban rap music with violent or obscene lyrics are grounded in racism, Thompson disagreed. "This issue is beyond race," he said. "It's about those people involved in sexual abuse and making a buck doing so."

Thompson said he does not believe the First Amendment protects obscene music, citing the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Miller vs. California. In that ruling, according to Thompson, the court decided that if the material appeals to the obsessive, is below local community standards, and is without any literary meaning, then it can be declared obscene under local obscenity laws.

"Society is becoming a toilet," Thompson said. "Women are being bound, gagged, raped, videotaped and sold. Sex is a wonderful thing, an expression of love between a man and woman, not something to force someone to do. Some people act on the material (they hear in the music)."

While Griff agreed that some 2 Live Crew music crosses the line, he said the black community should address that concern, and no one else. "I'm not into disrespecting women. I'm not down with 2 Live Crew," Griff said. "But why can't we, as mature adults, pull on their coats?"

A major problem, according to Griff, is the "double-standard" he believes American society has for blacks and whites. "The law needs to be changed. The law protects them (whites), but doesn't protect us," Griff said. "Lock up everyone. Andrew Dice Clay, Madonna, Hugh Hefner, right across the board."

"Madonna has clearly violated (pornography) laws," Thompson agreed. "Andrew Dice Clay is a pig that walks on his hind legs."

In the 2 Live Crew court case, Thompson pointed out, it was the band itself, along with members of the American Civil Liberties Union, who brought the case to court, trying to get the group's material declared non-obscene. The judge, however, ruled that the material "appeals to the loins, not the intellect," and declared it obscene according to local laws, Thompson said.

Griff feels that the only reason for challenging 2 Live Crew is because the music moved into mainstream society. "When (band

Carnegie Foundation's Boyer to discuss new view of scholar

Dr. Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, will be the featured dinner symposium speaker at EMU Friday, March 27, at 6 p.m. in the Corporate Education Center.

Boyer, who often is cited as one of the leading educators in the United States, has been president of the Carnegie Foundation since 1979. Under President Jimmy Carter, he was U.S. Commissioner of Education and, prior to that, was chancellor at State University of New York for seven years.

In California, Boyer taught at Loyola University, was academic dean at Upland College and was director of the Center for Continuing Education at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

He is senior fellow at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School, an education columnist for the London Times and was a visiting Fellow at Cambridge University and Fulbright lecturer in India and Chile.

Boyer served on national commissions under three U.S. presidents—Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Carter—and recently has served as a consultant to President George Bush. He was appointed to his current position as chair of the State Department's Advisory Council for American Overseas Schools by former Secretary of State George Shultz.

He has been awarded more than 100 honorary degrees and is the recipient of Columbia University Teachers College Distinguished Service Medal and Tel-Aviv University's President's Medal.

Dr. Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, will speak at EMU Friday, March 27, at 6 p.m. in the Corporate Education Center on the subject of his latest book, "Scholarship Reconsidered: Priorities of the Professoriate."

ty's President's Medal.

He holds a bachelor's degree from Greenville College and master's and doctoral degrees (in speech pathology and audiology, respectively) from the University of Southern California—Los Angeles.

At the symposium, Boyer will talk on "Scholarship Reconsidered," which is the topic of his latest book. Among the book's assertions is that the work of the professoriate has four separate, yet overlapping, functions: the scholarships of discovery, integration, application and teaching.

Responding to his remarks at the symposium will be Drs. Sally McCracken and George Perkins, both EMU professors.

The event is being sponsored by EMU's Division of Academic Affairs in conjunction with Continuing Education and the Faculty Center for Instructional Excellence.

The cost to attend is $30 per person, with reservations requested by Friday, March 20.

For more information or reservations, call Carole at 7-0407.

Boyer book excerpt

Dr. Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, will speak at EMU Friday, March 27. Below is an excerpt from his 1990 book "Scholarship Reconsidered: Priorities of the Professoriate," which will be the focus of his talk.

Today, when we speak of being "scholarly," it usually means having academic rank in a college or university and being engaged in research and publication. But we should remind ourselves just how recently entered the vocabulary of higher education. The term was first used in England in the 1870s by reformers who wished to make Cambridge and Oxford "not only a place of teaching, but a place of learning," and it was later introduced to American higher education in 1906 by Daniel Coit Gilman. But scholarship in earlier times referred to a variety of creative work carried on in a variety of places, and its integrity was measured by the ability to think, communicate, and learn.

What we now have is a more restricted view of scholarship, one that limits it to a hierarchy of functions. Basic research has come to be viewed as the first and most essential form of scholarly activity, with other functions flowing from it. Scholars are academics who conduct research, publish, and then perhaps convey their knowledge to students or apply what they have learned. The latter functions grow out of scholarship, they are not to be considered a part of it. But knowledge is not necessarily developed in such a linear manner. The arrow of causality can, and frequently does, point in both directions. Theory surely leads to practice. But practice also leads to theory. And teaching, at its best, shapes both research and practice. Viewed from this perspective, a more comprehensive, more dynamic understanding of scholarship can be considered, one in which the rigid categories of teaching, research, and service are broadened and more flexibly defined....

How then should we proceed? Is it possible to define the work of faculty in ways that reflect more realistically the full range of academic and civic mandates? We believe the time has come to move beyond the tired old "teaching versus research" debate and give the familiar and honorable term "scholarship" a broader, more capacious meaning, one that brings legitimacy to the full scope of academic work. Surely, scholarship means engaging in original research. But the work of the scholar also means stepping back from one's investigation, looking for connections, building bridges between theory and practice, and communicating one's knowledge effectively to students. Specifically, we conclude that the work of the professoriate might be thought of as having four separate, yet overlapping, functions. These are: the scholarship of discovery; the scholarship of integration; the scholarship of application; and the scholarship of teaching.

The first and most familiar element in our model, the scholarship of discovery, comes closest to what is meant when academics speak of "research." No tenets in the academy are held in higher regard than the commitment to knowledge for its own sake, to freedom of inquiry and to following, in a disciplined fashion, an investigation wherever it may lead. Research is central to the work of higher learning, but our study here, which inquires into the meaning of scholarship, is rooted in the conviction that disciplined, investigative efforts within the academy should be strengthened, not diminished....

In proposing the scholarship of integration, we underscore the need for scholars who give meaning to isolated facts, putting them in perspective. By integration, we mean making connections across the disciplines, placing the specialties in larger context, illuminating data in a revealing way, often educating nonspecialists, too. In calling for a scholarship of integration, we do not suggest returning to the "gentleman scholar" of an earlier time, nor do we have in mind the dilettante. Rather, what we mean is serious, disciplined work that seeks to interpret, draw together, and bring new insight to bear on original research....

The first two kinds of scholarship—discovery and integration of knowledge—reflect the investigative and synthesizing traditions of academic life. The third element, the application of knowledge, moves toward engagement as the scholar asks, "How can knowledge be responsibly applied to consequential problems? How can it be helpful to individuals as well as institutions?" And further, "Can social problems themselves define an agenda for scholarly investigation?"...

Finally, we come to the scholarship of teaching. The work of the professor becomes consequential only as it is understood by others. Yet, today, teaching is often viewed as a routine function, tacked on, something almost anyone can do. When defined as scholarship, however, teaching both educates and entices future scholars. Indeed, as Aristotle said, "Teaching is the highest form of understanding."

As a scholarly enterprise, teaching begins with what the teacher knows. Those who teach must, above all, be well informed, and steeped in the knowledge of their fields. Teaching can be well regarded only as professors are widely read and intellectually

Despite her own tragedies, Beaugrand always helps others

By Susan Bairley

Gerri Beaugrand is a woman with a mission.

Although her life is filled with entrepreneurial, family, and work activities as secretary to EMU's Parents Association and Wade McCree Scholarship program, her underlying goal is always to help people.

"I'm a survivor. I grew up with a 'waste not, want not' philosophy and I like to help. It gives me a good feeling inside and I try to respond as if I were in that situation," she said.

With that in mind, Beaugrand's role with both the Parents Association and Wade McCree Scholarship program seems quite appropriate.

"Through Wade McCree we're trying to help kids who are good students, with good potential, who haven't done as well as they might have because of their environment. Many come out of areas where the dropout rate is as high as 70 percent and they've had to live amid drugs and poverty. We're in a major campaign to raise $2 million in scholarships for those students."

With the Parents Association, Beaugrand is helping to garner support for EMU outreach and on-campus activities. "Our major campaign is to rebuild and expand the Parents Association and to help in the recruitment of students and parent volunteers," she said. "We're hoping to have 24 parents that will become actively involved in the recruitment of students and parents in regional areas, assist in Parents Day and Homecoming and also assist in orientation."

Beaugrand has worked at EMU since 1976, first in the Development Office for seven years under C. Bruce Rossiter, then Housing, as secretary to the director of residence halls. She also was secretary to Assistant Vice President Courtney McAnuff before assuming her current post.

With her entrepreneurial hat on, Beaugrand worked in the service industry, once involved in running a local carpet cleaning business and, most recently, as co-owner of Gerri Ann Enterprises, which took on the management of a Kentucky-based janitorial service last year. A former distributor of Amway Products, she and her husband, Verne Bahneman, were asked to assume management of a Kentucky company owned by a friend in Chicago.

During the eight months they ran the company, they watched revenues grow from $100,000 to nearly $400,000 in gross revenues, but decided to drop the project, in part, due to logistics.

"We didn't like being apart," she said. "We got an apartment (in Kentucky) in November and I was running back every weekend. I'd go down on Friday night after work and come back on Sunday afternoon and he was coming home once in awhile, but not too often because there were so many problems. Every time he'd leave, it seemed like there was a problem. But it certainly was a learning experience for us and we met a lot of nice people."

With that behind them, Beaugrand and her husband now are looking toward more personal goals. They're trying to get a publisher interested in a novel he has written and also spent time planning their official church wedding last weekend. "We took our vows together five years ago, in church, just the two of us. This March 20, the same day five years ago, we're solemnizing our vows together to make it legal," she said with a smile.

But Beaugrand's life has not been a proverbial "bed of roses." She experienced the deaths of several close relatives when she was a child, lost her first child at birth and then was hit with the tragic death of her 16-year-old son, Jeffrey, who was killed in 1986 when the car in which he was a passenger crashed near campus at the corner of Had seen and College Place.

"I had seen a lot of death, but you're never prepared (for the loss of a child)," she said. "They are not going to die before you do. You expect your parents to go, and there's a possibility your spouse will go before you, but never your children...that's one of the things that's hard to accept.

"It's hard (to cope) sometimes," she said. "Sometimes you can go and it doesn't bother you and (other times), when there's no reason, unlike his birthday or a holiday, it just hits you hard. But you just go on with your life. If it hadn't been for my faith, my family and my friends, it would have been much more difficult."

Because of the personal sorrow she's experienced, Beaugrand has a deep appreciation for life and takes an active and personal interest in dealing with the students she meets at EMU. She was an adviser for Arm of Honor fraternity for four years, is an honorary E-Club member, has been involved with the Residence Hall Association and, last year, wrote a "My Turn" opinion piece about responsible student behavior for the Eastern Echo.

"I don't hold back and I'm not shy about saying things," she said. "And I get real perturbed with non-thinkers. Because you didn't know better, or because you didn't think, doesn't change the action. "I see these kids who want to be treated like adults, but unfortunately, are not acting like older people or thinking, responsible people," she added. "Take the disturbance and shooting after the dance last this semester. What if someone had been killed? Or a policeman severely injured? What can you say or do to change it? Nothing. Everything you do has results. And actions and words can't be taken back." Beaugrand says she's "been fortunate to have worked for good people" during her 16 years at EMU and hopes to continue her career and life in a helping mode. "I enjoy people. That's one of my strong points," she said.

member) Luke was selling the tapes out of his trunk to blacks, it's O.K.," Griff said. "But not when it was out in public."

Both sides were able to agree during the volatile question-and-answer session that censoring obscene music must start with the heads of the music industry—the owners of the record companies—and work its way back to musicians. "Sex and violence sells," said Griff. "We need to go out and arrest Hugh Hefner."

Various outbursts came from the audience during many of Thompson's replies, including one from a woman who screamed "stop disrespecting me" after Thompson said he was working for the rights of women.

Other shouts from spectators prompted Thompson to call the EMU gathering "the rudest audience in 70 programs."

Thompson and Griff also exchanged jabs, with Thompson at one point telling Griff to quiet down and listen, "and maybe you can learn a little history."

When the debate moved to the issue of solutions, neither the two men or the audience members could reach a consensus.

engaged. One reason legislators, trustees, and the general public often fail to understand why ten or twelve hours in the classroom each week can be a heavy load is their lack of awareness of the hard work and the serious study that undergrads good teaching....

Here, then, is our conclusion. What we urgently need today is a more inclusive view of what it means to be a scholar—a recognition that knowledge is acquired through research, through synthesis, through practice, and through teaching. We acknowledge that these four categories—the scholarship of discovery, of integration, of application, and of teaching—divide intellectual functions that are tied inseparably to each other. Still, there is value, we believe, in analyzing the various kinds of academic work, while also acknowledging that they dynamically interact, forming an interdependent whole. Such a vision of scholarship, one that recognizes the great diversity of talent within the professoriate, also may prove especially useful to faculty as they reflect on the meaning and direction of their professional lives.

ResearchOffice of Special Education and Rehabilitative Service Proposed Funding Priorities

The U.S. Department of Education has announced the following priorities for fiscal years 1992 and 1993.

1. Research in Education of Individuals with Disabilities Program.

Priority 1: Initial Career Awards—This program supports individuals who have completed a doctoral program and graduated no earlier than the 1987-88 academic year for fiscal year 1992 awards to conduct research and related activities focusing on early intervention services and special education.

Priority 2: Research on Self Determination on Individuals With Disabilities—This priority will provide an operational definition for self-determination and assessment approaches for determining the level of self-determination. The assessment approaches also must provide methodologies for improving the operational definition of self-determination.

Priority 3: Including Children With Disabilities as a Part of Systemic Efforts to Restructure Schools—Typical projects supported under this priority must identify the critical policy, organizational, administrative and operating features for transforming schools into learning organizations and systems that are capable of continually monitoring their activities and performance in order to achieve better educational outcomes for children with disabilities.

Priority 4: Ombudsperson Services for Children and Youth with Disabilities—This priority will support services for children and youth with disabilities, their parents and guardians, special and regular educational teachers, state and local education administrators, and related services personnel to resolve systemic problems in a timely manner.

2. Special Studies Program

Priority 1: State Agency Federal Evaluation Studies—This priority supports cooperative agreements with state agencies for evaluation studies to assess the impact and effectiveness of activities provided for under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

Priority 2: Federal Evaluation Studies Projects Feasibility Studies of Impact and Effectiveness—This priority supports cooperative agreements with state agencies to perform feasibility studies that develop the conceptual framework for an evaluation study about a specific issue or question concerning the impact and effectiveness of special education and related services.

Priority 3: The Center For Special Education Finance—This priority is to support one cooperative agreement to establish a Special Education Finance center to provide policy-makers and administrators and the federal, state and local levels with data, analyses, expertise, and opportunities for information sharing complex and critical finance issues.

3. Technology, Educational Media, and Materials for Individuals with Disabilities Program.

Priority 1: Innovative Applications of Technology to Enhance Experiences in the Arts for Children with Disabilities—This priority is to support projects to advance the availability, quality and use of technology, media and materials in education of children with disabilities. The focus of this priority is for the development, modification, or adaption of innovation technologies to enhance experience in the arts.

Priority 2: Studying How the Design of Software and Computer Assisted Media and Materials Can Enhance the Instruction of Preschool Children with Disabilities. This priority will be to design software and computer oriented media and materials to enhance the development, learning and instruction of young (3-5) children with disabilities.

Priority 3: Demonstrating and Evaluating the Benefits of Educational Innovations Using Technology—This priority is to demonstrate, evaluate, and document innovative uses of technology.

4. Program for Children and Youth with Serious Emotional Disturbance

Priority: School Preparedness for Promoting the Personal and Social Development of Students with Emotional and Behavioral Problems Including Those with Serious Emotional Disturbance—The focus of the priority is to reorient and prepare schools in collaboration with families and other support service providers to provide schoolwide, proactive, positively oriented curriculum, instruction, and support services to exit schools.
